A second shuffleboard has been donated by a San Francisco man and Paul Robinson of the Macdowell Tavern offered to pay the freight on it from San Francisco, so it will cost the club nothing. He wants to eliminate the complaint of "nothing to do" for teenagers in Dorris. The club, he said, is to be as near self-supporting as possible. Members are to pay $1 a month dues to admit them to use the facilities of the club, and once a week or so the club will be opened to the public so adults can make use of the games. They will be charged regular billiard, pool and shuffleboard fees, he said.
