Vandals' RICKYS Hopes For NOTCHES 8TH WIN Title Dim CITY LEAGUE

"I take it your good ol' favorite custom made bowling ball didn't do so well tonight!" By The Associated Press Tailend Oregon State whacked Idsho 53-49 Monday night and all but knocked the Vandals out of the Northern Division, Pacific Const Conference, basketball race.

RIDICI" The loss dropped Idaho two and a half games behind the Wish-ington Iluskies, defending confer-cace champion, and gave the Van-dals a man-size assignment: They muga win four of their remaining live games lor an outside chance at the title. Thenton this because it seems to have a definite link with the death of the Far West league. Remember, Tony Robello, St. Louis scout, is well-known in Far West circles. The Browns worked with Ray Perry's Redding club.

It's my guess when Redding threw in the sponge, actually the stroke that folded the Far West league, he already had made ar-ragements to move the Browns' working agreement into Pocatello. Robello, you may remember, is an ex-Pocatello outfielder, at one time the town's hero, a long-ball hitter. IT WAS ROBELLO who presumably sold the Redding people a bill of goods.

He convinced the stockholder

He convinced the stockholders that another season in the league would put Redding so far behind the financial eight-ball, they'd nev-er get out of the red. When Far West league moguls met in Redding the day the league collapsed, they were ready to go and had no intentions of folding. Robello was there and right off the bat said Redding didn't want to continue in a five-leam league. When assured that Roseburg was on the hook and all but landed for the sixth team, Robello, I'm told, did a double-take and suggested the meeting be recessed for lunch and the matter be taken up after chow-time.

AFTER LUNCH, Robello said it was still 'no soap' -- that another year in the league would be too expensive.

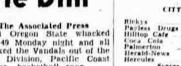

expensive. Mediord, on the fence but will-ing to stick with a six-team league, tumbled when Robello pulled out. That left just four teams and the rest--Klamath Falls. Eugene, Steno and Roseburg-had nothing else to do but quit.

It's generally assumed that if Redding had stuck the league would now be in existence.

would now be in existence. But the St. Louis Cardinals had pulled out of Pocatello and Robello saw a chance to move the Browns in his ewn town, where he was a here for so many years. It was fairly well established that Robello and Ray Perry, skipper of the Redding Browns, had been guarreling a good deal last senson. And I'm told that all was not harmony and light with Robello and Far Weat League President Jerry

It seems asic to believe that a word from Robello would have kept Redding in the league. With Red-ding in, the league would not have folded.

Ball-control tactics helped Ore-gon State to its second confer-ence win of the season Monday night. The Beavers held a 10 point lead going into the final six min-tues but the Vandals broke through their stall and narrowed the mar-gin to 52-49. Danny Johnston's free throw with 20 seconds left sewed up the game for Oregon State. Johnston led the scoring with 23 points. Hartley Kruger was high for Idaho with 20. Jay Griggs scored 27 for the Newsmen. Cal Bonney topped Rickys with 20, Don Peterson scored 18.
