

Antlers Eye Tie For Title Without Hubble

Engravers could be worked overtime inscribing both Chilquin and Bonanza on the Klamath County high school traveling basketball trophy—but the chances are better than even Chilquin will tuck the hardware in its showcase for the full year.

The two teams clash tomorrow night at Chilquin in the feature scrap of the last round of games before the showdown tournament opens Feb. 21.

RIDIN' HERD
WHEN THOSE—your writer was among them—waxing eloquent over last season's Oregon Tech football team said that the Owls "had grown up" in the pigskin business, it wasn't just an effort to grab something catchy out of the air.

Chilquin, undefeated in six league starts, is a cinch for at least a tie for the traveling trophy now held by Sacred Heart.

Regular season play also determines seeded spots in the tournament.

Apparently many schools up and down the coast figure Oregon Tech is just a wee bit too tough.

Bonanza holds a 5-1 record. Playing on their own floor isn't the only reason to favor the Panthers.

Three teams—Sacred Heart (4-2) besides Chilquin and Bonanza—have already clinched top division berths in the eight-team league, regardless of Friday night's shindigs.

Hunsaker has eight games signed. But he also has two open dates to fill.

The light for the traveling trophy isn't looked on as overly important. Because the tournament is the blue-chips event, the winner earning the right to district play-offs, the springboard to the Class B state tournament.

The last two years, the round-robin winner (Sacred Heart last year and Malin the year before) were upset in tournament play.

But all he got was return telegrams saying: "Sorry, school administration says no out-of-state games."

Antler Coach Merton Whipple said yesterday "Hubble will definitely not play against Chilquin" but added "he may be ready for the tournament."

Malin (3-3) has the inside track because the Mustangs are expected to make it 4-3 when they travel to Gilchrist to meet the Grizzlies, still looking for win Number 1 in six league games.

The same thing from Orange Coast, on the Oregon Tech schedule the last two years.

Whipple has some good news to counteract the loss of Hubble. Regular Vernon Haley, out for several weeks with the flu, will be ready to go against Chilquin.

But in the event Gilchrist upset Malin, two of three teams holding 2-4 records—Merrill, Henley and Bly—could creep into a tie with the Mustangs.

At least the wind is blowing in that direction.

BUT HUNSAKER wants 10 games and he has two angles he's working on to fill the two open dates.

He'll try to fill them with schools in the Northwest Conference, preferably Lewis and Clark and Willamette.

He wants those two because they're somewhat rougher to handle than Pacific U. or Linfield. Some didn't go along with Hunsaker and Assistant Art Kirkland when they hit town and immediately went after the toughest football state they could find.

The majority of coaches try to hit a happy medium, with emphasis toward billing teams that can be beaten without too much trouble.

But splitting even in a tough schedule looks better to me than going unbeaten against a flock of push-overs.

Last year the Owls did even better than that. They had a tough football row to hoe. They finished 6-3 and are looking for a better record next year.

Apparently their line of reasoning already is beginning to pay off. Oregon Tech landed smack dab in the middle of the football map last year.

No longer is Oregon Tech referred to as "that small trade school in Klamath Falls."

BUT TO GET back to Hunsaker's other plan.

If unsuccessful in the Northwest Conference, Hunsaker is toying with the idea of diving into the Central California area, where there's a flock of good junior colleges—Modesto, Fresno and others.

Southern Oregon will be back on the Oregon Tech schedule, as will Weber and Boise, already mentioned.

Then there's the three Oregon Collegiate Conference members—Vanport, Eastern Oregon and Oregon College—plus Humboldt State and Lower Columbia JC, Humboldt, Vanport, SOCE, Boise and Lower Columbia are down for Klamath Falls appearances.

PROVIDING Uncle Sam doesn't intervene, Oregon Tech will be loaded in 1952.

The only certain loss from last year's great team that was stocked with first-year men, is Carl Dudley, veteran center.

Rumor has Querino Lell coming back for another year after reports that he wouldn't be back.

All the rest—in the neighborhood of 30 boys—plus some newcomers will be on hand.

As it looks now, you can bet Owls will make their brighter name for themselves next season.
