George Grobicki, 60, former Polish officer, examines a pistol introduced as evidence at Washington, before the special House committee investigating the slaying of thousands of Polish officers in Katyn Forest early in World War II. Grobicki told the committee he had escaped death five times while a Russian prisoner between 1939 and 1941 and testified there is reason to believe the present Soviet ambassador to London commanded a Russian "murder" prison camp in World War II.
