Geary Speaker Students Win At GOP Meet Sales Honors

State Rep. Ed Geary is to be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Klamath County Young Republicans Feb. 28 at the Winema. The truck measure, passed by the State Legislature last year and referred for vote this Spring, is to be discussed. Carroll Howe, county school superintendent, will discuss school legislation. Chuck Johnson, Young Republicans president, has invited all interested persons to attend the meeting. The time is 8 p.m.

Klamath Union High School retail selling classes have nabbed the championship and runner up positions in state window display design competition. KUHS instructor J. W. Lake has announced. The school's first period class in retail selling topped all comers in the state, and has been sent to national competition while the second period class won second position. Lake said the displays were entered by photograph. Two of them were entered instead of the usual one because they were both so good that even an intra-school vote couldn't determine the better one. This is the first time Klamath Falls has ever won anything along this line in state competition, Lake said. The state department of vocational education is sponsoring the state contest, he said. First period retail selling class members at KUHS are Verla Barker, Jean Bragg, Dixie Gillock, Beverly Giovannini, Cora Hardman, Mary Joplin, Sheila Marvin, Doris McGaughey, Edward Moore, Pat Mueller, Katy Ryan, Troy Smith, Sue Sessler and Dot McKune. Second period students are Norman DuBois, Richard Fogle, Jeri Hardman, Loren Helbig, Lloyd Mullen, Sharon Pierce, Ervin Savo, Freda Scoggins, Donna Webber and Pat Wulfrum.

'Operation Shoestring' Aids Mental Patients

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR. SALEM (AP)—A new method of treating mentally ill patients by giving them work is the Oregon State Hospital's "operation shoestring." This program of occupational therapy has been going on for three months, literally on a shoestring. But the results are so encouraging that the hospital will ask the legislature to finance it adequately. Occupational therapy means any activity prescribed by a physician that is supervised by a trained therapist to aid recovery. Similar work has been done by the hospital for a couple of years. But it was only three months ago that a trained therapist, young and pretty Miss Flora Fisher, came to make a real department out of it.

EDUCATION Miss Fisher comes from Vancouver, B. C., and was graduated last year from San Jose State College in California. It is one of the four Pacific Coast colleges which train occupational therapists. She conducts classes in weaving, making belts, manufacture of bracelets, copper tooling, and leather work. She also supervises a limited amount of carpentry work. Miss Fisher has her shop in the basement of a new ward building, but much of her work is carried on in the treatment wards. No money is provided for the work, but the hospital is scraping a little together here and there to put on this limited program. Miss Fisher says seven or eight trained therapists are needed to carry on the program as it should be done. The main value of the work is that it keeps the patients' minds out of their delusions and gets their backs to reality. The therapy isn't given to incurables. Here's a typical example. There is a 33-year-old patient who is preoccupied by body complaints. She couldn't think straight. Her psychiatrist prescribed stimulative creative projects. Miss Fisher had this woman make a photograph album and do copper tooling. Then the woman took an inventory of the shop. She soon forgot her supposed body ills and got her mind back on the right beam.

BETTERMENT These patients make beautiful articles. They are sold by the hospital, and the money goes into the patients' betterment fund. Three attendants help Miss Fisher. Ladies from the Salem Council of Churches do volunteer work. These church women each work a couple of afternoons a month. This means there are a couple of the church women on hand at a time to help Miss Fisher get materials ready. Miss Fisher is enthusiastic about her job, asserting she has learned more in her three months on this job than she ever did before. But, she adds, "it's an awfully big job for one person." When the weather gets nice, she'll start art classes on the hospital lawns. She believes, and the hospital doctors agree, that if the legislature allows an adequate therapy program, many patients will be helped.
