Tanker Saves Navy Fliers

GUAM — A U.S. Navy tanker Wednesday rescued four of five airmen who bailed out of B-29 weather plane when an engine exploded 150 miles northwest of Guam Tuesday.

Search is still on for a fifth man. Five others presumably died in the explosion.

Military authorities named three of those rescued: Capt. Michael Judge, New York, whose wife, Ruth, and family live on Guam; Lt. Edward W. Erickson, Superior, Wis., and PFC. James L. Deese, Camden, Ark. They were uninjured.

The name of the fourth man rescued was not available. He was picked up about nine miles from the spot where the other three were found.

The four survivors were aboard the tanker Tombigbee, due to reach Guam early Thursday.

An Air Force spokesman said the plane was returning from a routine weather mission when oil leaks developed. The pilot radioed for help and was joined by a B-29 rescue plane.

The engine on the weather plane exploded shortly after. The rescue pilot saw men parachuting from the weather plane, dropped a lifeboat and a life raft, and radioed for more help.

Ralston To Speak At Knife, Fork

Cameron Ralston—an ex-soldier, miner, college professor and executive secretary of the famous Chicago's One Hundred in the days when it was gunning for Al Capone will be the principal speaker at the next meeting of the Knife and Fork club here.

Knife and Fork officials report Ralston "a man of courage and vision... a brilliant lecturer."

The Greek island of Lesbos lies less than 10 miles off the Turkish coast.

Included in reorganizational plans is the placing of the recreation and physical education operations under a separate department head. This has been done within the school already, but needs approval of the committee and subsequently of the state board to gain permanent standing.

Skeet O'Connell is the head of the present department. The school also plans to ask the committee to recommend to the state board that approval be given the continued negotiation leading to the national accreditation of Oregon Technical Institute.
