Military Space Station Is Dream Of V-2 Brain; May Be Possible Soon

By HOWARD L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor
HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — There will be no Iron Curtain anywhere if the vision of the maker of the terrible V-2, German guided rocket that bombarded England from Holland comes true.

The vision is a military space station, a tiny, man-made moon, 1,075 miles up, which each day will see every square mile of the earth's inhabited surface, and the people moving around as clearly as from an airplane at 5,000 feet.

The dreamer is Professor Werner Von Braun, the youthful German genius who made the seemingly impossible V-2, and who now at 39 feels that the military satellite is possible. He lives here and is taking American citizenship papers.

The military satellite will circle the earth once every two hours. It will circle from north to south at nearly right angles to the earth's rotation. Its orbit is fixed, with the earth rotating eastward below.

Thus if it comes down over New York City at 10:00 a.m., it will be on its next circuit down from the north somewhere over Denver and the West Coast.

In 24 hours it will see everything on the earth by daylight. And also it will come up each trip on the opposite side for a night view by radar. This will give it two looks a day at everything.

The satellite will carry a telescope, through which you can see a strip of earth more than a thousand miles wide as clearly as if you were only 5,000 feet away.

Looking down you can see far better than looking up, from earth's surface. If you want to see why, try looking through this tissue paper at a printed page a foot behind the paper. You see no letters.

But lay the tissue on the page and you can read it. For the watcher on the satellite our air is the tissue paper, and it is in contact with the earth.

Mexican Cattle Ban To Go Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States announced Wednesday it plans to lift a ban against cattle, sheep, swine and other ruminants and livestock products from Mexico by Sept. 1.

The embargo was put into effect in December, 1946, when an epidemic of hoof-and-mouth disease broke out there.

Plans for removing it were disclosed in a joint statement issued by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan and President Miguel Aleman of Mexico.

The embargo will be lifted providing there is no new outbreak of the dread animal disease in the meantime.

This announcement came only about two weeks after the United States had closed the Canadian border to livestock and livestock products because of outbreak of the disease near Regina, Saskatchewan.

The disease also exists in much of Europe, Asia and in parts of South America.

Just how many cattle Mexico may be able to supply the United States is not known now.

Before the embargo, Mexico shipped between 269,000 and 580,000 head of cattle annually to this country. This compares with domestic slaughter of about 25,000,000 head last year.
