Comeback Staged By Most Grains

CHICAGO (AP) — Grains developed a firmer tone toward the close of Tuesday's board of trade session on reports of renewed export and flour business.

Bakers were reported to have taken an estimated one million sacks of flour, and Austria was said to have taken a cargo of corn in addition to an equal or larger amount taken earlier by United Kingdom.

The resulting short covering in wheat and corn pushed all deliveries above the previous close in grains.

At the finish wheat was 1/8 to 3/8 higher than the previous close, May $2.51 1/2, corn was 1/4 to 1/2 lower, May $1.85 1/2. Oats were 1/4 to 3/8 lower, May 86-86 1/2. Rye was 1/2 higher to 1/4 lower, May $2.01 1/2. Soybeans were unchanged to 1/2 higher, May $2.93 3/4, and lard was 10 to 18 cents a hundred pounds lower, May $11.87.

In The Day's News

corn scandal that makes sense is that the bureaucrats, once they had bought the corn and BOOSTED THE PRICE, lost interest in the ever-normal granary idea.

After that, all they were able to see in it was a SUBSIDY that would keep the corn farmers voting the Democratic ticket.

If the stored corn rotted — Well, in that event, it was OFF THE MARKET and could no longer depress the price.

That's the trouble with a planned economy. In time, the planners cease to be economists and BECOME POLITICIANS. The idea that eventually dominates the thinking of all politicians is how to keep themselves in power.

Let's go back to the start of the ever-normal granary idea. It is told most interestingly in the Book of Genesis.

Joseph, the eleventh son of Jacob and the apple of his father's eye, was sold into slavery in Egypt by his jealous brothers. He was bought by Potiphar, the captain of Pharaoh's guard, and eventually became a big man in Egypt.

The Pharaoh had a dream. In it, he saw seven fat cows grazing by the river. Then along came seven lean cows and ate up the seven fat cows. He sent to Joseph, who interpreted the dream to mean that Egypt would have seven years of plenty, followed by seven years of famine.

Greatly impressed, Pharaoh promoted Joseph on the spot to be the overseer of a plan to store the grain in the fat years and dispense it in the lean years. It worked so well that when the lean years came Egypt sat pretty through all of them.

There came famine in the Land of Canaan, as well as in the land of Egypt. Joseph's peridious brothers came to Egypt for grain. He was a noble character. He sold them grain, but put the money for it back in the sacks. I haven't time to tell the story in detail here, but the upshot of it was that Joseph's aged father, when he saw the grain and learned where it came from, said: "It is enough. Joseph my son is yet alive. I will go and see him before I die." So all his children and grandchildren and even great-grandchildren, loaded their things into the wagons and journeyed into the land of Goshen, where Joseph met them. Pharaoh permitted them to settle there.

They remained there for the rest of their lives and their descendants lived there UNTIL MOSES LED THEM OUT OF EGYPT.

I hope you get the point that they lived there until Moses led them out of Egypt and back home. In the meantime, over the slow passage of the years, they had become SLAVES.

That's what a planned economy does to people. It seems so easy and so wonderful at first. It is so splendid to rely on SOMEBODY ELSE to do all your thinking and all your planning for you. No headaches. No worries. Just leave it all to PAPA.

I'm afraid that's what all this planned economy is doing to us. SO—

What I hope is that we may find a Moses who will lead us out of it before it is too late. Before we become slaves of the dangerous habit of leaving everything to Papa and not worrying our little heads about it.

Geese Marked To Show Route

If you see a Canada goose during the next month or so wearing a brightly colored neck band of red, green, yellow or white, don't think it is a freak, says the Fish and Wildlife Service. Instead, the bird is a member of the winter colony at the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge in coastal North Carolina and one from a group marked with plastic neck bands for the purpose of learning more about local movements in relation to food supplies and evidence of maintenance.

About 250 of the Canada geese which wintered at the Pea Island Refuge during the past season will fly northward with these bright bands around their necks. These geese have just started their northward flight up the Atlantic Coast and across the Eastern States.

All persons who see any of these marked geese are urged to report the place and date of observation immediately to the Bird Banding Office, Fish and Wildlife Service, Patuxent Research Refuge, Laurel, Maryland. Probably not more than one or two birds in any flock will carry the telltale identification but it can be seen at about 100 yards with the naked eye, or a quarter of a mile with binoculars.

The plastic bands are expected to disintegrate or drop off within six weeks or two months. These neck bands are quite different from the conventional aluminum leg bands which may remain on birds for 10 years or more. Sometimes these are worn so smooth that chemical treatment is required to make their numbers become visible again. Preliminary tests with the plastic neck bands on captive geese indicate they are harmless to the birds.

From banding recoveries of southbound geese during the hunting season, there are indications that most of the North Carolina birds nest in the region from James Bay eastward through the Province of Quebec and into Labrador. The majority of these are believed to move northward in the general vicinity of Chesapeake Bay over central Pennsylvania and through the Finger Lakes section of New York. Some, however, are known to take a coastal route, as evidenced by recoveries from Massachusetts, Maine, and New Brunswick.

(Continued from page 1) funds were involved. Police questioned the three guards — Johansen, and Dennis Walsh, of Boston, and Joseph Riley of Revere — to determine just what happened in the robbery.

BIGGEST HAUL — The Danvers robbery was the nation's biggest cash haul since Feb. 29 when the home of L. V. Redfield in Reno, Nev., was burglarized of $1,500,000.

It was the latest in a series of recent holdups in New England which netted $115,000.

The Credit Union of the Quonset Point, R.I., Naval Air Station was robbed of $100,000 cash and a bank in Medford, another Boston suburb, of $15,000.

Tuesday's holdup was the largest in this area since the Brinks Express Company was robbed of $1,200,000 cash in Boston on Jan. 17, 1950.
