SATURDAY QUICKIES:
Call for O. K. Puckett! He's the man who, through direct action with bulldozers or indirectly by the threatening use of his name, gets the ugly and illicit garbage and tin can dumps cleaned up. It's the road from Langell Valley to Gerber dam that we're calling to his attention, and it's the culprits who have been dumping junk along that road that we're threatening with a call for O. K. Puckett!

The Sacramento Bee on March first increased street sale price from a nickel to a dime.

Gov. Len Jordan of Idaho told Congress this Idahoian (and East-Idahoian) want no part of the Reclamation Bureau's proposed Hell's Canyon dam because it would: (1) Violate the state's water rights; (2) force the state to form a power authority to protect the 300,000 kilowatts to be reserved to Idaho; (3) impair navigation; (4) result in a tax loss; (5) flood mineral resources; (6) add to the federal debt.

The Baker, Ore., chamber of commerce, on the same subject, said that it might improve navigation for the resident (which are rattlesnakes, jackrabbits, coyotes and cophers). . . but that it "would completely destroy recreation," not improve it. . . and that smaller private enterprise dams there instead would save the taxpayers millions of dollars and put millions on the tax rolls. . . and what's more, that Sen. Wayne Morse was not acting for the people of Oregon when he introduced the Hell's Canyon bill.

Now we find out that we could have saved those 3-to-6 seedling ponderosa pine trees that were so carefully transplanted to the right spots in the yard last fall. Yep, the mice gnawed them. The preventative measure to clear away all grass and litter for about a foot from the trees before snow flies. So says Gene Gross of the Experiment Station anyway. . . and we'll double check it with the Old Trapper before next fall.

"Gilly" Gilmore, the Lake of the Woods homeowners head man, says that response to a Cabin Raising Bee for Camp Esther Applegate has been terrific. . . wonder how it will be when it comes time for work?

Alas the polls are barred to her—because she forgot to register!

COURAGE
KLAMATH FALLS—Don't sniff for the odor of soap because this letter is not from a soap box orator. Neither is it from a "do gooder" who entertains ideas of banishing all evil forevermore. It is from an average mother of two boys, aged eleven and eight years.

Last Monday morning I was feeling very snug and secure. The boys were in school. Their clothes were all clean so I didn't have to wrestle with the washing. Everything was in the cupboard to bake my older boy, so I did not have to run to the store for eggs at the last minute. Everything was under control and I had no problems. I thought!

A gentleman knocked at the door and inquired if I had a son by the name of my younger boy. I answered yes and invited him in the house. There had been a theft in the neighborhood, and this gentleman from the police department had learned my son and another boy had been seen around the building. The theft was no childish prank; a typewriter and money had been stolen!

Mr. Editor, did you ever try to build a name with news like that? Well, don't try it. It won't work. After school the officer picked up my son and the other boy. The four of us went to the Police Station.

Death Claims Boy in Canal

LAKEVIEW—Roy James Neasham, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Neasham, Westside, drowned Thursday when he fell through the snow into an irrigation ditch. He was on his way to school.

The attending physician reported that the boy apparently had been stunned by hitting his head on the concrete abutment as he fell through the snow.

The boy was pulled from the ditch by Lynn Tomlin. When the disaster car arrived, two men were working over the boy in an attempt to revive him, and Al Getty, of the disaster car crew, said the car was called about 9 a.m. and time of the accident has been estimated at half an hour or so earlier. A friend of the Neasham boy ran a quarter of a mile to a neighbor who got the boy out of the ditch and started resuscitation. The disaster car brought the boy to the Lakeview hospital, meeting the doctor of the way. The car was turned at a newly installed headgate.

WASHINGTON—The Truman Administration's attempt to clean up government corruption looks as pretty as a dove that fell in a tar barrel.

Months have passed and still no investigation, although there's been a little excitement and some big talk.

When the noise subsides over Thursday's double-firing of Newbold Morris and Attorney General McGrath — Morris by McGrath and McGrath by President Truman — you get to the meat in the coconut with two questions:

1. The heat was on McGrath and his Justice Department but why did it take him so long to get hot?
2. Does Morris know what hit him? (For that matter, who does, outside McGrath and the President?)

On Feb. 1 McGrath appointed Morris to investigate the government. Morris said he'd start with McGrath's own Justice Department. On Feb. 25 he said he'd send government officials a sharp questionnaire about their financial sources.

LONG WAIT
A couple of weeks later he sent the questionnaire to McGrath and his Justice Department first. McGrath had a week to decide whether Morris was right or wrong with the questionnaire.

So why, knowing all about the questionnaire so long, did it take McGrath so long to get indignantly so indignant that he sacked Morris, especially since only last Feb. 1 he had promised Morris "complete, enthusiastic and unlimited cooperation."

Morris has been a kind of babe in the woods ever since he came here. He's issued a number of statements which got him headlines but could hardly improve his investigatory technique; he's quarreled with members of Congress who denounced and investigated him; and after two months on the job he had a staff of only 10 lawyers, plus some other help and had investigated exactly nobody.

Morris seemed to think he had

Therefore, an older person who has an attack need by no means take a pessimistic view.

In another recent discussion of heart disease and other physical ailments by a prominent and distinguished physician, it was pointed out that fear of heart disease may react unfavorably on the heart itself, and certainly on the other activities of the body.

In the course of the article, he mentioned several patients who had had heart attacks, but had been able to surmount the mental effects and had led long and active lives for many years thereafter.

Certainly, every experienced physician will endorse the need for an intelligent attitude by the person who has had a heart attack by putting fear in the background. It is not easy to develop this attitude, but the passage of time does help.

Among the patients in the group whose first attack occurred before they had reached the age of 45, there was only a slightly better outlook than in the older patients.
