

APPETIZING AND ATTRACTIVE, a snack tray is an easy and gracious solution to the problem of party refreshments.

Snack Tray Easiest Way To Entertain

Completely in keeping with the modern trend of informal entertaining, the snack tray helps lend a note of relaxed friendliness to any party or gathering.

Fun for guests, because they can help themselves to refreshments, the snack tray can include almost any assortment of tasty tidbits.

Use a big tray and place the cheese to be served in the center. Around the cheese, arrange several kinds of crackers and small dishes of pickles, olives, radishes.

raw carrot and celery strips, avocado slices and colorful relishes along with chilled shrimp, spiced ham cubes, deviled tongue spread, sardines, herring, anchovies or any zesty meat and fish.

Set the tray in a spot convenient for all guests and complete the festive effect with tall, smart pill-sener glasses of sparkling beer.

Whether guests are invited or unexpected, a colorful and appealing snack tray is easy to arrange in a jiffy from foods at hand in the refrigerator or cupboard.

When you hang clothes out on the line to dry, clothe them at their strongest points, with the weight distributed equally over the line and no tension to pull them out of shape.

As an added touch of a thoughtful hostess, try keeping a freshly laundered house robe in the guest closet.

Grandmother Wilhelmina Keeps Watch on Dutch Brood

WASHINGTON—A doting grandmother, former Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, is keeping a watchful eye on the four young daughters of Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard during their parents' visit to the United States.

The aging mother of Queen Juliana, who assumed the title of "Princess of the Netherlands" when she gave up the throne in May 1948 after 50 years' reign, remains constantly in the background and leaves the spotlight of publicity on her only daughter and her son-in-law.

"Princess Wilhelmina is enjoying a very much deserved rest," an official of the Netherlands embassy here told me. "However, she is still interested in many things, charities, social welfare dedicated to the good of her loyal former subjects."

Wilhelmina, who on Aug. 31, 1888, her 18th birthday, assumed reign over the Netherlands, piloted her nation through a period of great prosperity and social progress. She also suffered with it through two world wars.

In addition to her stay in Ottawa where her third daughter, Margriet, was born Jan. 19, 1943, Juliana spent some months at Lee, Mass. Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard have left Margriet, Beatrix, 14, Irene, 13, and Marijke, 5, at a large and beautifully landscaped park. In recent years Wilhelmina has turned her interests to religious writings and the painting of landscapes. She is often seen with easel and brushes putting on canvas her beloved countryside. A year ago an exhibition of her work was open to the public in an Amsterdam art gallery. Before you buy pure linen hand towels, note the workmanship, particularly hemstitching — whether hand or machine embroidered, and find out if they are colorfast.
