German Unity Plan Opposed

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diplomats predicted Friday the Western Powers very probably will reject Russia's new demand for a four-power conference on unifying Germany.

Soviet insistence that any German peace treaty must give a unified Germany her own independent Army, Navy and Air Force was seen as a major obstacle to an East-West agreement.

Russia also stood by her original suggestion that the Big Four, not the United Nations, should decide whether all-German elections are feasible.

Officials here, in predicting rejection of the latest Russian move, emphasized however that the final decision will be reached in talks just starting between representatives of the American, British, French and German governments.

British diplomats also took a dim view of the Russian efforts to arrange a four-power conference on Germany. One British official in Germany commented: "There doesn't seem to be anything in this (Russian) note that could make a four-power talk possible."

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer studied the note at his home and arranged a prompt meeting with the three Western allied high commissioners. At this meeting he is expected to give them his views to be transmitted to London, Paris and Washington for use in preparing a response to Russia.

The United States favors turning down the latest Russian proposal, but it wants full allied agreement. It particularly wants understanding and support in Germany.

A flat rejection poses a touchy problem. It would have to be phrased in such a way as to convince Western Europe that the Russian bid for German unity is merely a phony but dangerous propaganda move, and that the West also wants a unified Germany, but under a system that will safeguard her from Communism.

Top authorities here view the latest series of Russian moves, first set off by a March 10 Soviet proposal, as merely a maneuver to disrupt the Western defense buildup.

DRAMA

The March 10 note dramatically reversed Russia's postwar stand against a rearmad Germany. It proposed a unified Germany with her own independent Army, Navy and Air Force—but without the right to join any alliance against a World War II enemy. It suggested the U. S., England, France and Russia hold a conference to work out a treaty along these lines.

The proposal was immediately viewed in some circles as a propaganda move because unification is the overriding political issue throughout Germany and any step toward a settlement arouses enormous European interest.

On March 25 the Western Powers, in a carefully weighed, carefully worded answer did not turn down the idea of a unified Germany. But they rejected the Russian idea of a national German armed force, and a ban on any alliance between Germany and other Europeans.

They asked how the Soviets proposed to unify Germany and set up a government, and in turn proposed that the Russians let a United Nations commission look into the possibility of holding free elections in Eastern Germany.

APPREHENSION

There was speculation — and real apprehension — that the Soviets would radically change their policies and (1) agree to western suggestions for the U. N. inquiry, (2) flatly agree to free elections at once under Big Four supervision, or (3) reverse their postwar policy and display a willingness to reconsider returning to Germany territories now held by Poland.

This would be a high price for a "neutral" Germany, outside the Western Power orbit, if some feared Russia might be inclined to pay it in view of the definite progress being made by the West.

Papers Reveal Chiang's U.S. Policy Meddling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A series of documents relating several alleged attempts of Chinese Nationalist diplomats in Washington to influence American foreign policy have been made public by Sen. Morse (R-Ore).

Morse said he believes they are genuine and warrant prompt action on his proposal to investigate the "China Lobby" of Nationalist supporters.

One of them tells of the hiring of a man named Hanlon, identified in the message as a former law partner of one-time Democratic National Chairman William Boyle.

The message, dated June 17, 1950, when Boyle was the party chairman, says "the relationship between Boyle and Hanlon is extremely close" and that Hanlon therefore "is capable of reaching the highest levels of the proper authorities."

It also said "we could also receive secret information from Hanlon. It said Hanlon was willing to be a legal adviser for $30,000 a year."

GOP CHIEFS

The messages also tell of contacts between Chinese Nationalist diplomats here and several Republican leaders, including Sen. Taft.

ty is limited and he is influenced by Acheson all of the time. Therefore, there is no chance for a change of China policy as long as Acheson is in power.

A message dated July 20, 1950, one month after the Korean War began, said Taft "was immensely interested in the problem of Formosa."

"Your humble subordinate, Chiang Kai-shek," it continued, "gave Taft the following idea: 'We Chinese are willing to share the responsibilities along with Gen. MacArthur in a fight against Russia and Communism, however, the economic strength in Formosa is weak and the source of manpower is limited, whereas, the mainland of China is teeming with guerrillas and a practically inexhaustible source of recruits."

"What they need is a proper leader and a proper organization. You are the best natural leader of Asia and the best partner of the United States as well."

"The above idea will be used by Taft either in his forthcoming speech which will in turn sell the same idea to the United States authorities."
