Tulips and Diamonds Make Queen's Visit Spectacular

Queen Juliana of the Netherlands is leaving in the wake of her pleasant visit to the States, two impressions that are likely to stay with Americans for some time... One of beautiful flowers and one of beautiful diamonds.

It is not surprising that the Queen's collection of diamonds is a breathtaking one since Holland is the land in which so many of the diamonds of the world have been cut and polished into their full beauty for years.

Everywhere the Queen turned during her New York visit, she found herself surrounded by masses of tulips and other bulb plants native to Holland, and everywhere she went, her carefully planned costume was highlighted by her jewelry.

When she stepped from the plane at Washington airport, one of the first things to catch the eyes of reporters was the set of handsome diamond and ruby eardrop earrings and the diamond and ruby bow clip she wore.

These earrings are among her MATCH 'EM UP

Truce Balloon Gone Astray

FANMUNJOM, Korea, (AP)—Allied truce negotiators reported Wednesday one of their silver-colored balloons is missing.

The balloon, one of those hoisted over this truce talk site to warn airplanes away, broke loose Tuesday. It was last seen soaring toward North Korea.

The U. N. Command asked the Reds to watch for it.

A favorite dress and are the same she wore at her "inauguration".... a term which the Dutch prefer to the term coronation. In addition to these lovely pieces, Queen Juliana also brought with her an outstanding set of aquamarine jewelry, a magnificent strand of large Oriental pearls with which she wears diamond and pearl clips, a set of pink quartz jewelry, earrings, clip, ring and bracelet of light blue sapphires, and an ensemble of diamond jewelry worth a fortune.

A great deal of the Queen's beautiful jewelry was presented to her at the time of her marriage and at the time of her inauguration by various colonies of the Dutch Indies. It is interesting to note, too, that in the Netherlands there is no such thing as the Crown Jewels. The jewelry worn by the Dutch Queen is her personal property as opposed to many of the pieces worn by Queen Elizabeth of England, for example, which are the property of the State.

Another interesting note which has caught the attention of people who have seen Queen Juliana is the fact that she wears her wedding and engagement rings on her right hand. According to the Jewelry Industry Council, this is the general custom in the Netherlands and other parts of the continent, the only exception being people of the Catholic faith.

like, but their interest in jewelry seems to vary. They show a particular fondness for charm bracelets, lockets, particularly heart shaped ones, and watches.

The Queen's appreciation and interest in jewelry seems to be shared by her four charming daughters, as well. Photographs taken of them from time to time show that they nearly always wear several pieces of jewelry. At their Mother's inauguration they each wore bracelets, strands of pearls and small brooches.

The girls generally are dressed

SQUAW SKIRT

New fad for summer will be the "squaw" skirt, easy to make and fun to wear. It requires no ironing. After laundering, the skirt is rolled into a tight rope, tied at each tier, and hung up to dry.

Drying on a hanger helps to prevent wrinkles when drying nylon, rayons, seersuckers and corduroys. Most wrinkles can be shaken out as the hanging is done. Straighten hems, collars, seams and cuffs.
