Administration of State Forest Land Considered

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House Public Lands subcommittee worked Thursday to wind up a lengthy hearing on administration of 402,000 acres of Oregon forest land. The lands now are administered jointly by the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management (BLM). A pending bill would place them under the sole control of BLM.

Sponsors contend the lands are properly part of the land grant given the Oregon and California Railroad in the late 1860's and subsequently retaken by Congress.

The Forest Service, in testimony presented Wednesday by Lyle Watly, chief forester, said the attorney general has held the lands as national forest lands. He said even the Department of Interior, of which BLM is a part, considered the land to belong to the Forest Service prior to 1939.

Watts said the 18 Oregon counties supporting the bill do so because it would be to their financial advantage. If administered as O & C lands, the counties would share in 75 per cent of the receipts from timber sales under present law. As national forest land, they would receive but 25 per cent.

Watts also challenged contentions that BLM's administrative program is better suited to such community needs as road construction.

The chief forester said his agency has spent nearly five million dollars for road construction, exclusive of maintenance, within the last 10 years in Clackamas County, one of the 18 O & C counties. Timber purchasers have spent about a half million yearly on permanent roads, he said.

Scheduled to appear Thursday are Fred Mynott, associated solicitor of the Agriculture Department; Jacob Wasserman, Interior Department attorney; a representative of the American Forestry Society; and Sen. Gordon (R-Ore.), who has sponsored a similar bill in the Senate.
