THROWN BY ELEPHANT—Mrs. Doris Scott, 20, Phoenix, Ariz., housewife and former circus worker, lies in a Phoenix hospital with broken neck received when she attempted to win $1,000 offered by a circus for three-minute ride on a bucking elephant at contestant's own risk. She failed. (AP Wirephoto)

PTA Notes

Mrs. John Inaley was installed as next year's president of Shasta PTA at a meeting held May 15. Other new officers will be Mrs. Harold Gredel, first vice president; Mrs. Kenneth Ramsey, second vice president; Mrs. Ralph Fuller, secretary; Mrs. Imogene Boushby, treasurer. They were installed by Mrs. Earl Sheridan and each was presented with a corsage. Students of the fourth and fifth grades presented numbers given at the County Music Festival recently at OTI. Thirty six children were given physical pre-school examinations in preparation for entering school next fall. The summer library will be under the supervision of Mrs. Ray Yunk. Refreshments were served by the teachers.

Andrew Loney Jr.

Seniors are to report at school Friday morning at nine for baccalaureate practice. They will march into the school auditorium for this program Sunday afternoon. The Rev. Galen H. Onstead, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will be the guest speaker. Parents and friends are invited. Tickets to the commencement exercises will be distributed to Seniors Friday morning, as well as the caps and gowns. Students except for Seniors, will begin final examinations this Friday. Their schedule will be as follows: Friday, exams in first and fourth period classes; Monday, exams in their second and fifth period classes and Tuesday, exams in the third and sixth period classes. They will follow a modified schedule, and will attend school only during the two and one-half hours required for actual testing in each period. Hans Norland Auto Insurance, 627 Pine St.

U.S. Trucking Industry Fights Oregon Tax Law

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR.
 SALEM — Should trucks be forced to pay more taxes or less? Is Oregon's weight-mile system of taxing trucks fair?

These questions, which have a lot of bearing on Oregon's program of modernizing its highways, will be answered by the voters in November.

Truckers and highway engineers over the whole nation are awaiting the results, because Oregon was the pioneer in the weight-mile tax system. It was begun by the 1947 Legislature, and taxes the trucks on the basis of their weight and miles traveled.

FAIR SHARE
 The American Trucking Industry would like to knock the whole idea in the head before it spreads to other states. Most highway engineers like it because they think it be trimmed, or the private car owner would have to pay more. The truckers, in arguing against the weight-mile tax, have long claimed that the weight of a truck doesn't make any difference. They argue that heavily laden trucks don't cause as much damage as automobiles. The Oregon Highway Commission has just received the final report of the Maryland road test, in which the Eastern states ran trucks over a mile stretch of road in Maryland to find out just what damage trucks cause.

CRACKS
 The test showed that 22,400-pound single axle loads caused six times as much pavement cracking as 18,000 pound loads, which are the legal limit in Oregon.

The trucks have been trying to get larger weight limits. The 22,400-pound axle loads now are legal in 12 states, mostly in the Northeast. But the Maryland test probably will prevent the weight limits from being increased in Oregon. This test was the first ever

The highway engineers don't think a fuel tax is a fair measure of the amount of damage done by trucks. They say a plate tax favors the big truckers at the expense of the little ones.

The engineers claim that if the weight-mile tax is eliminated, the result would be that the private car owner would have to pay a much larger share of road costs.

CAMPAIGN
 During the next five months, the American Trucking Industry will campaign hard in Oregon to wipe out the weight-mile tax.

The railroads, which have to maintain their own roadbeds, naturally want to see the weight-mile tax increased on trucks. But they aren't making any move to support these higher truck taxes, because they fear that would be bad public relations.

In trying to put the anti-weight-mile tax provision in the Constitution, the truckers would tie the hands of the Legislature. The only way it then could tax trucks would be by levies on gas or diesel oil, and by license plate fees.

Oregon is starting a big highway building program. If the revenue from trucks is decreased, the program either would have to

Cancer Group Extends Drive

Officials of Klamath County Chapter, American Cancer Society, decided at a luncheon report meeting Wednesday at the Pelican Cafe, to continue their funds drive till the end of May. Elton Thomas, drive chairman, announced funds obtained in the drive, would not be revealed till the campaign's completion. Commendation was given members of the medical auxiliary for its work in the cancer organization, and it was asked to continue its work for the coming year. During the meeting it was pointed out that 25 cents of every dollar collected in the drive go for national research; 60 cents for local service and education and 15 cents to pay for production of movie, pamphlets and other educational material. It was also noted memorial funds for persons dying of cancer have been made possible, with the donor's name entered at the State Hospital in Portland and credit given the local chapter for the amount donated.

Vacation Bible School Planned

Calvary Baptist Church, E. Main at Garden, will hold vacation Bible school all day Friday. Starting at 10 a.m. and ending at 3:15 p.m., demonstrations, conferences and instructions will be given by John T. Sisemore, Sunday school secretary of the Oregon-Washington Baptist Convention. He will be aided by a staff of experts on religious training. The meeting is open to vacation Bible school workers of all churches. Each person attending is asked to bring a sack lunch.
