Election Cost Up In Klamath

The May 16 primary election cost Klamath County $16,824—and possibly a little more.

A few of the election bills have not been turned in to the County Clerk's office, although most have been paid.

With 13,246 persons voting, the cost per ballot to the county was approximately $1.27, a little higher than the average election cost in past years.

However, several factors contribute to the increase. The pay of election board workers was 75 cents an hour this year, compared to 50 cents an hour previously, and election board costs, including pay, meals and some transportation, came to $8508.

The complete poll book was gone over by addressograph machine just prior to the election, and that expense also added to the cost of the election. It should result in speedier handling of poll book work and consequently a saving of time and money for future elections.

The ballots this year for the primary were exceptionally lengthy and counting took longer than usual. Some counting boards worked for 12 or 14 hours, contributing to higher costs, and the ballot printing also was more expensive than for past elections.

However, more persons voted May 16 than generally turn out for a primary election in this county, and that tended to reduce the per-ballot cost.

The cost included ballot printing, election notice printing, poll book printing and makeup, registration of voters, extra clerical help, election board workers, meals, transportation of election supplies, rental of some polling places, setting up booths and the official counting.

The Klamath Falls election cost, paid by the city, so far has amounted to just $554. That includes only official election advertising and city ballot printing.

The election cost was a little more than was anticipated. The Klamath County budget for the 1951-52 fiscal year earmarked only $14,000 for elections. So the May 16 voting ran that fund $2,824 into the red.

Methodists Mark Gain

SEATTLE (AP) — More than 500 Methodists here for the 79th annual Pacific Northwest conference were told Wednesday a membership gain of 9,500 in the past year "proves the Methodist Church has lost none of its evangelistic fervor."

The speaker, the Rev. Dr. Gerald Kennedy, bishop of the Portland area, took sharp exception to what he termed "recent remarks" the church "is not an evangelistic church."

"I am getting sick and tired of this kind of talk and of people apologizing for Methodism supposedly losing its evangelism," Bishop Kennedy declared.

The increase in membership which he said was the largest in the history of the conference "certainly proves the Methodist Church has lost none of its evangelistic fervor."

The increase was credited largely to the recent United Evangelistic Mission, and to the Rev. Owen Beadles, Seattle-Tacoma district superintendent, general chairman of the campaign.

During the sessions the appointment of the Rev. Richard Decker as new superintendent of the Spokane district was announced. The Rev. Decker, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Bremerton, will succeed the Rev. Harold E. Bahor who is ending a six-year term.

Pioneer Newsman Passes at 70

DETROIT (AP) — William E. Scripps, 70, president of The Evening News Association and publisher of the Detroit News died Thursday morning at his Lake Orion country estate.

His wife Nina, said Scipps died of a heart ailment brought on by a prolonged respiratory disease.

Had he lived until June 26, Scripps would have completed 56 years of service to the News founded by his father, the late James E. Scripps, in 1873.

In addition to his newspaper activities, Scripps was a pioneer in radio broadcasting. He founded the News operated radio station WWJ in 1920. WWJ was the first station in the nation to carry a regular schedule of broadcasts.

Air Pollution Study Planned

PORTLAND (AP) — The newly organized State Air Pollution Authority soon will undertake surveys of the few areas in Oregon where pollution has become a problem.

That was reported Wednesday following a meeting here at which Richard Hatchard was confirmed as director.

The authority is a division of the State Board of Health and will use the board's engineering and secretarial staff, Hatchard said.

The authority established by the last Legislature, has as its purpose the prevention of air pollution which might menace health.

Merle West, Klamath Falls, and Oren L. King, Eugene, are among the board's members.

ART L. DIXON, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Dixon, serving on the USS Iowa in Korean waters, has been promoted to Yeoman 3-c. He has been in the service two years, overseas since March. He recently wrote home that a radio broadcast (May 23), originating in Moscow, informed listeners that the Iowa and two American destroyers had been sunk by Red action.

Tourists Due In Rockies

DENVER (AP) — A flood of tourist gold — close to three quarters of a billion dollars — is expected to pour into the Rocky Mountain States before a summer's end.

It will be spent by an estimated 20 million persons from other states. That's close to five times the population of the seven states with their lofty peaks, summer glaciers and high altitude coolness.

Despite the bites chewed from income by taxes and high living costs, nearly all of the seven states covered in an Associated Press survey expect more pleasure-seeking visitors than ever.

An American Automobile Association director last week predicted nearly 22 per cent of all American vacationists will visit Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico this summer alone.

Wyoming, with only 290,000 residents, this year put on its biggest promotional campaign. Howard Sharp, secretary of the state's Commerce and Industry Commission, believes it will reap three million tourists and more than the $102,461,000 spent there last year.

In New Mexico, home of Indian ceremonials and 688,000 residents, state tourist director Melvin Drake believes that, at the present rate 6,500,000 visitors will spend 180 million dollars before they head for home.

Colorado officials, who count the tourist trade as a top industry, look for 3,300,000 visitors who'll spend $247,500,000.

The summer calendar is crowded with everything from greyhound racing to grand opera. But like the other states, scenery and high altitude coolness are the main attractions.

Local Man Tells Of Talk With Last Of Early Ore. Pioneers In Indian Days

By F. J. CHITWOOD

Many years ago I was a guest in the home of Mrs. Kirkwood, who lived at Hopewell, northwest of Salem, where she told me stories about the early settlement of Oregon that I have never seen in print. One I think is of such interest that I am writing it so it can be printed, perhaps for the first time.

But I must relate a little of the background in order that it may be understood.

The first two white women to cross the Rocky Mountains were Mrs. Whitman and Mrs. Spaulding. Both were wives of missionaries.

Dr. and Mrs. Whitman founded a mission a few miles this side of Walla Walla, and the story of Dr. Whitman's and Mr. Lovejoy's long journey in order to save Oregon to the union is history.

Whitman went on to Washington to interview the president and secretary of state, but they did not think that the country was worth the trouble to take.

But Mr. Lovejoy who had stopped in Missouri had real success.

He had gotten together a large train of immigrants made up of hardy Missourians whose determination was to take Oregon for the union.

The train was nearing the summit of the Rockies when Kirkwood, who was one of the last of the survivors of that first train was six years old at the time.

She said that the discussion was animated, some wanting to abandon the wagons and put the women and children on the animals and go on through as light as possible.

Others did not take that view so the argument went on.

But in the meantime a lone horseman rode up clad in buckskin clothing and sat on his horse listening until he got the run of the conversation.

He broke in abruptly saying, "By all means take your wagons for you will need them when you get there." "Who are you?" He was asked, and replied, "I am Dr. Marcus Whitman and I'll show you a way to get there."

The little six year old remembered the incident well, and also the reply: "All right we'll take the wagons."

Dr. Whitman had a flour mill at his mission and was able to furnish them with food. They left a trail, the Oregon trail, behind them.

Sometime afterwards the Whitmans and a number of children were massacred by Cayuse Indians, and, when the report reached the Willamette Valley, the settlers, (for others had followed the first train) in their grief and rage, raised a tiny army and went after the murderers, who eventually were caught and hanged.

Now where the Whitman mission stood is a grave with fourteen buried in it. On the hill above it is a large monument with just one word on it—Whitman.

In plain sight on up the valley is Walla Walla College, whose graduates are carrying on pioneer work similar to that of Dr. and Mrs. Whitman in nearly every nation in the world, and beyond, in the city, is Whitman College, carrying on the work begun by Marcus and Narcissa Whitman. A tress of Narcissa's beautiful hair may be seen in the museum in Portland, also the writing desk that she carried across the plains on her pony.

In the historic McLaughlin house in Oregon City, may be seen the piano she played on when she stayed in the McLaughlin home for a time.

What would have become of those settlers if they had left their wagons?

Whitman's determination saved Oregon, Washington, and Idaho.

B.C. Loggers Ask Pay Hike

VANCOUVER, B. C. (AP) — A conciliation board Wednesday recommended no wage increase for 32,000 loggers and sawmill workers in British Columbia.

A majority report of the board inquiring into the dispute between the International Woodworkers of America and 163 coast lumber operators also recommended that the cost-of-living bonus remain the same as in the 1951 wage agreement.

The current contract expires Saturday night and the union has already applied for a government-supervised strike vote. The union is seeking a 35-cents-an-hour wage increase. The operators proposed a wage cut of 10 per cent in most wage classifications. Current basic rate is $1.29 ½ an hour.

GOT THE BIRD

DOVER, O. (AP) — They finally spotted the thief who has been stealing coins from Mrs. D. L. Staneart's mail box.

The dastardly deeds have been perpetrated by a wren that entered a small opening in the box at nearby Tippecanoe. The coins had been left to pay for postage.

Mrs. Staneart hasn't found out yet where the bird spends the money.
