Navy Says Booze Helps — But Not Very Much

WASHINGTON (AP) — Don't run for the nearest saloon until you've read the last word of this, but Navy scientists have discovered that alcohol — like in Bourbon — has a mysterious power to lessen the likelihood of death from radiation similar to that of atom bomb rays.

These scientists, however, were working with mice in the Naval Radiological Defense Laboratory at San Francisco — which makes a difference.

Eighty-four per cent of mice that got a heavy injection of alcohol survived after they later were exposed to medium doses of rays. Another group of mice got no alcohol but the same amount of ray exposure — and every one of them died.

The Navy scientists, after other experiments which turned out about the same way, said there seems to be some definite relationship between the amount of alcohol and the survival rate of mice.

But there's a catch. A Navy officer says mice handle their liquor, or rather alcohol, differently than man. They can survive a phenomenal dose of alcohol, size considered.

If a man drank as much alcohol as the mice received, in proportion to size, the man would have to take around three-fifths of a gallon of average whiskey, the officer estimated.

Some scientists have estimated a man's liquor capacity — 154-pound man, at sea level, on a cool summer day — is around one quart a day.

If that's true, three-fifths of liquor would kill a man before the rays got him.

Army, HST Mum on Mac

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither President Truman nor the Pentagon appears willing to say whether they think Gen. Douglas MacArthur is violating Army regulations in agreeing to be the keynote speaker at the Republican national convention.

Truman told his news conference Thursday he regards the keynote role as political, but as to whether he thought MacArthur should retire from active duty before filling it, the President said that is the Army's problem.

In answer to another question, Truman said he had not discussed the matter with Army officials, but if he is not satisfied with what they do he said he would call them down.

Just wait and see, he told reporters.

The Army announced last Tuesday it was not considering any action in connection with MacArthur's designation as convention keynote speaker.

Since then, it is learned, the Army has made it plain it also does not intend to act later, that it will do nothing about the matter. That position is described as being predicated on the belief that when Congress created the five-star rank for certain Army and Navy officers it established a special category of rank, different from any other.

All this had the effect of leaving an atmosphere of uncertainty around the status of any other general or GI who might decide to take an active part in the political campaign.

Budworm Spray Set

SALEM (AP) — Spraying 640,000 acres of Oregon forests to kill spruce budworm probably will begin next week, the State Forestry Department said Friday.

The project will begin as soon as the worms emerge.

The plan calls for the State Forestry Department to spray 366,000 acres, and for the U. S. Forest Service to spray 280,000 acres.

The state will spray lands in northeastern Oregon, while the federal forest service will spray areas in the Mount Hood and Willamette National Forests and on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation.

The spraying will cost $1 an acre, including materials and the cost of spreading it by private contractors.

The spraying program started in 1948. Since that time, 2,128,000 acres have been sprayed. About one million acres still must be sprayed, and the project will end next year.

Manager Plan Up for Vote

TACOMA (AP) — Tacoma electors probably will vote on the council in November.

A Freeholders' Charter Commission voted Thursday night in favor of presenting the issue to the electors. It decided to bring in an outside expert to help draft the ballot proposal.

Under the proposed plan, the voters would elect a council, which would hire a manager. Tacoma now has a mayor-council form of government.
