

FOUR ACES . . . full-up and sleepy. Formulas are prepared in spotless kitchen.

★ ★ TIPS
★ ★ from the
★ ★ Stork Market
★ ★

MRS. COLETTE CONE (standing) and Mrs. Helen Logan, guardians on the third floor.

Klamath Valley Nursery

By Ruth King

Babies! Babies! Babies!
Baskets of babies thrive on scientific care and affection in the nursery at Klamath Valley hospital.
A visit to this antiseptically sterile, well-staffed, modern nursery is an eye-opener to the visitor, usually permitted only an eager-beaver look through a window pane at a new addition to the family.
(continued on a following page.)

NURSE HANKA gives personal attention to a hungry boarder. Normal babies are fed every four hours, day and night.

TINY SANDRA WARD weighed around two pounds when she arrived April 27 to say "Hello" to her mamma and daddy, Mr. and Mrs. Amyie Ward, Darris. Premature babies are kept comfortable and growing in an incubator . . . go home at five pounds.

WHOOOPS! HE'S GAINED an ounce . . . head nurse, Nellie Hanka, weighs a husky fellow. Babies' weights are closely checked.

BABY BOY AND BABY GIRL Hall, (1 to 7) just one hour old and not a bit interested in the cameraman. The twins, born June 5 are children of Mr. and Mrs. Robott Hall, Chiloquin.