Land Reform Sweeps India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A revolutionary land reform took place in Uttar Pradesh state Tuesday when 400 absentee landlords handed over estates totaling 60 million acres to 13 million small farmers.

The reform to abolish absentee landlords was engineered by the government of Prime Minister Nehru, which paid off the owners and sold the land to tenants at a figure 10 times greater than the annual rent they had been paying.

In a message Nehru said: "let us celebrate today as a day of progressive emancipation of our peasantry, although it is only the first step—the ultimate goal is complete social justice."

Stork Market Trips

Newborn infants are checked for sex and name in the delivery room then taken directly to the nursery on the third floor, cleansed, rechecked and marked for identification. A double check to prevent error is used. Name beads, spelling out the surname circles one wrist and an identifying piece of adhesive tape circles an ankle.

Each is dressed in shirt and diaper, wrapped in a cotton blanket provided by the hospital and placed in a basket which also bears his name, weight and date of birth.

No food is given for 12 hours. Normal infants then go on a four hour feeding schedule day and night. Premature or weak babies get a feeding every three hours, unless otherwise specified by the attending physician.

Contrary to widespread belief the largest percentage of babies today are breast fed with some supplementary feeding.

Feedings for the entire 24 hours is prepared in the hospital's modern new nursery formula room, shining with stainless steel. Nellie Hanka, R.N. in charge of the nursery days makes all formulas.

Babies are taken to mothers on wheeled carts for a thirty minute period, then are fed again in the nursery.

Premature babies are placed in incubators which automatically help them breathe, keeps the temperature even and the infant warm. They are kept in the hospital until they reach five pounds. Children with a sub-normal temperature also go into incubators.

The hospital recently purchased a $1,000 respirator to be used for babies who do not breathe properly. Such a child is immediately put under oxygen and automatic air pressure on the chest induces regular respiration.

A blue baby will turn pink in 15 seconds in this plastic tube.

Careful daily check is made of weight gain, and temperature. Regular baths are given and the well-fed youngsters are tucked in baskets to sleep most of the 24 hours.

Crying, (and they DO cry for exercise), bothers the nurses not one whit if it's a healthy cry. Children who show signs of illness are removed at once to an isolation ward for special care and treatment.

The nursery room painted pink and blue has room for 25 new arrivals and sometimes every one is occupied.

One hundred twelve infants arrived in May, 58 boys and 54 girls, including two sets of twins.

The hospital provides two labor rooms, two delivery rooms and a waiting room for expectant mothers and for anxious fathers, who feel the need of pacing. Most prospective dads just look worried but once in a blue moon, one faints, like the father of twins who was so surprised he keeled over in a corner.

Most births occur during the night.

Mortality among newborn infants is almost nil, the percentage being extremely low in ratio to births. There is no discrimination against race or color and the nurses care as tenderly for a colored child as for a white infant.

Mothers usually stay in the hospital for four days unless complications arise which is infrequent. Maternal deaths are extremely rare.

Doting papas and grandparents, may see the newest arrival in the family through the nursery window, during visiting hours, simply by holding up a card marked with the family name, posted on a "birth board" outside. Nurses are generous with "looks," giving plenty of time to let fond relatives decide who junior looks like.

The first question usually asked is about weight — the bigger the baby the broader the smile.

All babies are charges of the hospital until they are handed through a car door to one of the parents or a representative of the family. A nurse or nurse's aid releases the child at the curb.

A full staff of nurses works each eight hour shift and one or more registered nurses is in attendance at all times.

Mrs. Colette Cone is succeeding Nellie Hanka, in charge of the nursery when these pictures were taken. Miss Hanka is a recent bride and is retiring for the present from her profession.

Mrs. Mary Adams is supervisor of the third floor, most exciting in the hospital where young Americans make their first appearance. Mrs. Helen Logan was in charge during the absence of Mrs. Adam's when the cameraman recorded life in the nursery.

Mrs. Lillie Stubbs is day assistant, Mrs. Lillian Shaw is the registered night nurse with Doris Radford also on the staff.
