HST Leaves For Chicago Convention

WASHINGTON — President Truman took off for Chicago Friday to cap the fiery Democratic convention with a "give-em-hell" speech against his favorite foe, the Republicans.

The President left National Airport in his plane, The Independence, at 1:41 p.m. (EST), still muttering over the speech he hopes will help lead the way to a Democratic victory in the November election.

Mrs. Truman accompanied her husband. There was a flurry of excitement a half hour before Truman departed. The nose wheel tire went flat for some unknown reason. It was quickly repaired.

The President's timing was remarkable. At the exact moment that he was boarding his plane, Thomas J. Gavin of Kansas City, his convention alternate, was calling Truman's ballot at Chicago. It was for Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

Truman will speak from notes in addressing the convention at 9 p.m. (EST) Friday night. He is at his oratorical best when he is not reading from a prepared text.

And he was telling no one just what he intended to say. There were two things, though, that the President was expected to stress.

He had brought about an agreement to end the steel strike and he was ready to stump the country for the Democratic nominee, no matter who he happened to be.

He also could hammer away at the argument that the steel strike victory was won without use of the Taft-Hartley act while the Democrats are pledged to repeal.

Survivors include three sons, Jack of this city, Robert of Eugene, and Richard of Seattle; also 10 grandchildren.
