Side by side they march . . . the veterans of our two world wars. Though they were born in different eras, both represent the same cause in America's proud history . . . for both were defenders of our democracy. Both manned the lines, despite the ultimate in danger. They were proof to the world that our citizen-soldiers can face and defeat those dedicated to a totalitarian way of life. They were proof that the spirit that helped found this nation, that struggled against odds over a hundred and fifty years ago, has not weakened. Those who march here are our warning to the dictators and aggressors of this world that Liberty is eternal, and like the fabled Phoenix, it can never die, but is perpetuated in the flames of determination.
