Chiloquin

By DARLENE WOLFF
The Good Neighbor policy doesn't apply only to Latin American countries. Lloyd Ross, local rancher, returned home last weekend after spending 48 days in the hospital, to find that his friends had mowed, raked, baled, and stacked his hay crop. Ross was stricken some ten days before he was hospitalized with a somewhat rare disease known as "Q" fever. During the long weeks in the hospital his condition had often been listed as critical.
Two weeks ago the hay was ready to harvest. On Monday and Tuesday volunteer helpers mowed, later in the week others raked the hay, over the weekend the baling was done and by the time Ross was brought home by ambulance the bales were neatly stacked, ready for winter feeding.
During the harvesting Mrs. Ross served meals to workers, on the peak day she fed 24.
Ranchers who either helped with the work or did other person's work so that they could help were Amos and John Duval, Robert and Ivan Doak, Harry Pearson, Joe Miller Sr. and Jr., Clarence Miller, Roy and Bud Gienzer, Lawrence Myers, Ben Murphy, Henry Jack and Gerry Wolff, Ted Knight, Regie Sargeant, George Wright, Clay Miller, Jack Plundley, and John Wright. Some of Henry Spicer's equipment was used. Women who helped in the house at times were Mrs. Harold Collins, Mrs. Harry Pearson, Mrs. Joe Miller, Mrs. Herman Aiken, and two of Ross's sisters, one from Burlingame, Calif., and one from Portland.
During the long illness Monty Ross, a younger brother, came to be on the ranch and for nearly three weeks Mrs. Ross and her brothers were here. The Ross family includes two children, Kathleen, 7, and Larry, 5.
Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Doak and daughters were relatives of Mrs. Doak. They included the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ellefson, an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Eberg Ellefson, and a cousin, Delbert Ellefson, the last three of whom she had not seen for four years. It was the first time that the visitors had seen Bobbie Jay, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sutton of San Jose, Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson of Sacramento, and Mrs. Virgil Merritt of Long Beach, were guests a week ago of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wolff of Williamson River. They had all attended the Miss Universe pageant in Long Beach and visited Crater Lake while in this vicinity.
Mr. and Mrs. Gien Kircher had guests last week, a navy buddy, his wife and son, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Ray and Kelly, Springfield.
Terry Lane was the name chosen for the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Hengst, born July 2, in Klamath Valley Hospital. The young fellow is the grandson of Mrs. Ruby Peeler.
Friends are receiving cards from the Ellery Echlin family who are on a month vacation and are visiting friends and relatives in Klamath. They will be home at the end of the month.
