

DUNKIN' DELIGHT

Shrimp Stars Dunkable Food

A good dunking sauce — with plenty of tasty bits to dunk — will go a long way to set the mood for a gay, informal party. The sauce should be a spicy one, however, not too sweet or too bland; the dunking bits should be crisp, crunchy and well chilled. You don't have to market the town over for dunkable food, either. Cauliflowers, for example, are easily made from a head of fresh, white cauliflower. Wash the vegetable, separate the flowerettes and chill them in ice water. (Be sure to drain and dry them well before serving.) Rosy, pink shrimp, cleaned, cooked, chilled and served whole are an ideal dunkable food, especially if the tails are left on. There are plenty of these delectable shellfish, fresh or quick-frozen, on the market right now. Boil the shrimp for three to five minutes in water to which pickling spices have been added. When you clean the shrimp — either before or after cooking — try to slip the shell off so that the tail remains.

HONEY LEMONADE
Extract juice of one lemon. Add one to three tablespoons of honey. Stir to dissolve. Add one cup water. Serve over ice in large glasses. Garnish with lemon slice on rim — add a berry or sprig of mint if desired.
