Hedy Lamar's Temper Said Talk of TV Alley

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
 HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Exclusively Yours: Hedy Lamar's temperamental flip-flops over changing her type from sexy Hedy to Siyapstick Hedy are the talk of TV alley.

Signed as the guest of ventriloquist Paul Winchell and Jerry Mahoney, Hedy demanded a flip commercial role. Paul, 14 advertising men and six NBC vice presidents finally talked her into doing the sexy dramatic skit that had been prepared for her.

Hedy, it's said, stopped burning only after New York TV critics hailed her performance as one of the best movie star bits on video this year.

Annual Rally At Clackamas

Annual Camp Meeting and Convocation of the Church of God for 1952 convened at Clackamas July 25. It ends Aug. 3. A large staff of speakers are present this year according to an announcement by the Rev. A. Clarence Roper, State Chairman.

Among the staff speakers are: The Rev. A. W. Crim, Anderson, Ind.; guest preacher, The Rev. Ralph Starr, Hamilton, Ohio, song leader; The Rev. and Mrs. W.M. Donohew, missionaries from Africa; and Daisey Boone and Adam Williams, home missionaries.

Theme of the meeting is "Honoring Christ Through His Word." Daily features of the meeting: Lectures for ministers, camp for children, youth meetings, and general worship and prayer meetings.

Klamath Man Starts Fight

SALEM (U) — Two guards were injured Wednesday in brief disturbance at the Oregon State prison.

Warden Virgil O'Malley said James Q. Anderson, a 29-year-old convict from Klamath County, started the fight after becoming intoxicated on pruno — a fermented drink made of fruits and vegetables discarded by the prison canteen.

Guard James Schultz attempted to quiet Anderson and in the fight that followed he suffered a knife wound. Another guard, Raymond O'Neill, who rushed to aid Schultz, was attacked by other convicts.

Capitol Beauty Plans Revealed

SALEM (U) — A master plan for development of Oregon's state capitol buildings to "make Salem the most beautiful capital city in the United States" was proposed Wednesday by Francis Kealy, New York architect.

Kealy, who designed the present capitol and who was hired by the State Board of Control to prepare a long-range plan, said his plan calls for extension of the Capitol Mall to four blocks long. The mall now is one block long, but currently is being extended for another block.

The capitol and proposed supreme court building would be at opposite ends of the mall, with four state buildings on each side.

The only buildings now constructed are the capitol, and library, public service, and highway buildings.

Kealy said his plan, which requires legislative approval, would take care of the state's needs for the next 20 or 25 years. At the end of that period, the mall would be extended another four blocks to D street.

General Denies Saucer Story

SEATTLE (U) — Air Force chief of staff Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg says he doesn't believe there is such a thing as a flying saucer.

"They are not machines flown by men from Mars, nor from any foreign powers," Vandenberg, told interviewers Wednesday. "Nor does the Air Force or any U.S. Military agency have a flying saucer."

Vandenberg added the Air Force has investigated all reports received since the end of World War II "and never has found anything to substantiate existence of such things."

Vandenberg conferred here with officials of the Boeing Airplane Co.

Report On Radar Sightings Of Flying Saucers Over Washington

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
 WASHINGTON (NEA)—The flying saucers are back.

And their return to the headlines has been the result of a startling new development:

For the first time, numerous and simultaneous visual sightings have been positively confirmed by official Civil Aeronautics Administration radar observations. This has happened twice under almost identical circumstances on two successive Saturday nights.

Up until now official and unofficial saucer debunkers have produced credible theories to explain away reports of visual sightings as natural phenomena. They have done the same for individual radar sightings reports.

But none of this reasoning satisfactorily explains away visual sightings absolutely confirmed by radar.

This remarkable new chapter in the weird flying saucer story was written in the skies over Washington Air Force base also confirmed the sightings.

When the center radar showed one of the unidentified objects in a low position in the northwest sky, the operators in the tower were able to see it. One of them, Howard Cocklin, who has been with CAA for five years, describes it: "It was a good-sized light, yellow to orange in color. At first it looked like a great big star. Then it began to move in a manner which made you realize it couldn't be a star. There was no unusual high speed about its movements and at times it seemed to hover. We could see it moving around like that for about 15 minutes. It just disappeared into the northwest sky."

There are no windows in the center Barnes was operating. None of the eight men could leave to go outside to try to check their own radar sightings visually.

As is normal at that time air traffic was very light. But at the first opportunity an operator in Barnes office contacted Capital Airlines pilot Capt. S. C. Pierman shortly after he took off and asked him to look for the objects.

For about 14 minutes, Pierman was in direct, two-way communication with Barnes. While he was within radar range, Pierman was able to see six objects which showed up on the path indicated by the center's radar. Pierman's sightings reported to Barnes coincided exactly with the radar sightings, Barnes reports.

Since then there have been thousands of sightings all over the world, many obviously reported by crackpots. But a substantial number have been so strange and reliably described, even the Air Force has had to admit that they were unexplainable.

Many books have been written on the subject. Hundreds of magazine articles have treated all aspects of the question. However, a review of most of what has been written and officially reported on the subject points up several unique aspects to the recent Washington sightings:

It's the first time that three separate radar sets have reported identical sightings.

It's the first time they have remained under observation in one area for so long a time.

It's the first time so many completely responsible men, including radar operators and pilots, all observed and reported the same thing at the same time, with all reports checking so accurately.

Both nights there were scores of unofficial stories of persons in the area who claim to have seen one or more strange lights moving about in the sky.

Saul Pett, news service reporter in River Edge, N.J., wrote a detailed story on one that he saw just before seven objects appeared on the CAA radar screen at National Airport. He said: "It looked like a sphere, so deeply orange colored that it apington for six hours before dawn on Sunday, July 26, and again one week later. The details and implications of what took place are now confirmed by CAA and the Air Force.

Since then the Air Force has quietly said it was closing to the press its special section at Wright Field in Dayton, O., which has been studying flying saucer reports. In addition, all information concerning that group's personnel, activities and budget is now strictly classified.

Full details of what happened the first night are being revealed for the first time by NEA Service.

These are the facts:

Beginning shortly after midnight, and continuing until dawn, eight experienced CAA radar operators and technicians, manning the air route traffic control center in hanger No. 6 at National Airport, tracked from seven to ten identifiable and mysterious objects performing strange gyrations in the skies in a 30-mile radius above Washington.

Harry G. Barnes, who has been with CAA for nine years, mostly in radar work, was in charge of the group. After making sure that the objects were not known aircraft and that the radar was operating perfectly, he checked his findings with the radar operators in the control tower. They instantly confirmed what he saw, and continued to do so. The two radars are completely separate units.
