

THE CHOW LINE—There was plenty of beef and beans at last Sunday's Elks Club picnic held at Malin Park, and hundreds of guests made the most of the provender. This shows just one of four food lines operating.

French Leader Critical Of NATO Armament Plans

LOMONT, France (AP)—Defense Minister Rene Pleven said Tuesday the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are trying to rearm Europe on a year-to-year basis instead of by a coherent long-range program. He insisted that France cannot defend herself with only arms imported from the U.S., but must have her own armaments industry. He warned that he would not let any workers now engaged in armaments industries fall into unemployment if French expectations of off-shore orders failed. Pleven spoke at a launching of the first warship turned out by French naval yards since the war—the 1,310-ton escort vessel "Corse."

Most of his speech was aimed at the recent dispute between France and the United States on the question of U.S. defense orders for French arms factories. France has asked for a total in off-shore contracts of $625 million over three years. America has promised her $188 million in the current fiscal year but declined to commit herself further. Negotiations are still continuing in Washington. The defense minister said "certain Washington editorialists" falsely presented the French case "so as to give a delicate discussion a turn."

He declared if they had seen the war damage in Lorient and Brest after the war, seen France's recovery and the war she was conducting in Indo-China to defend an immense area of Asia, they would not have been so unjust as to attribute the French demands for aid to a desire to limit her own efforts. Pleven said he thought the present difficulty was less an essential difference between France and the United States than of the need for a deep revision of the methods used to finance North Atlantic Treaty objectives.
