Has Anybody Seen a Monkey

Anyone seen a ringtailed simian? Mrs. Florence Bartlett, Macdoel, took her pet monkey "Georgia" out for some fresh air near her home a week ago last Thursday. A dog trotted up, frightened Georgia, and she scampered away. Mrs. Bartlett immediately put out a call about the animal, and first word came from the Dorris Quarantine Station.

Georgia had been spotted traveling north along the telephone lines paralleling the highway just below the station, swinging arm over arm (with tail in there somewhere).

Georgia is about the size of a half grown kitten, Mrs. Bartlett said, and is five years old. She had a copper wire collar around her neck and was a pet on the Bartlett place.

Mrs. Bartlett would like anyone seeing the animal to notify her by calling the Shasta View Court, Dorris.

Stevenson To Meet Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House said Monday that top administration strategists will give Gov. Adlai Stevenson a briefing Tuesday on the "international and defense situation."

The Illinois governor, Democratic candidate for president, will arrive in Washington at 10:45 a.m. (EST) by plane for scheduled talks with President Truman and his cabinet and other aides.

The briefing on international affairs will precede a cabinet luncheon.

On hand for the conference will be President Truman, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, director of Central Intelligence; Averell Harriman, Mutual Security director; Secretary of State Acheson; Dr. John R. Steuart, acting Defense Mobilization Director; and Jack Gorrie, chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

After the briefing, Truman will escort Stevenson to the state dining room for the cabinet luncheon.

The president and Stevenson will get together after that for private talks in Truman's White House office.

This will give the two a chance to discuss intimately the role the Illinois governor wants the President to play in the campaign.

Young Wilder Returned Here

Six-year-old Ian Wilder, son of Dr. and Mrs. Francis D. Wilder, Klamath Agency, was brought to Klamath Falls for hospitalization yesterday from Newport where he was seriously injured in a freak accident on the beach last Wednesday.

The youngster was playing with his brother Greg, 8, on the Newport Beach. According to reports, a log washed up on the shore was rolled over on young Wilder by a wave.

Brother Greg attempted to free him, but was unable to until another wave rolled over them, moving the log again.

Ian suffered a crushed leg, injured pelvic structure, a broken back and badly cut abdomen.

The Wilders were vacationing at Newport when the accident occurred. Dr. Wilder is the doctor at Klamath Indian Agency.

1952 Called Year of Amateur VS. The Professional in Politics

By DON WHITEHEAD
SPRINGFIELD (AP)—This is the year of the amateur versus the pro in American politics. This fact has been sharply defined in the opening maneuvers of the two presidential candidates—Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adlai E. Stevenson.

In the Republican camp, Eisenhower—the amateur—has surrounded himself with professional politicians wise in the ways of running a national campaign.

In the Democratic camp, Stevenson—the professional—is gathering around him amateurs whose names are almost unknown on the national political scene.

This development is only one of a number of sharp contrasts in the manner in which Eisenhower and Stevenson have approached their widely different problems.

These contrasts point up the difference in personality, background, training and temperament of the two distinguished men who will lead their parties into the November election fight.

Let's take a look at Eisenhower's first days as a political campaigner.

The retired general, early in June, shed his uniform and went back home to Abilene, Kan., to make his first major speech. The Abilene show, it is well known, was a disappointment to most of Eisenhower's supporters.

Eisenhower was disappointed too. So a few days later in Detroit he threw away his prepared speech and talked in the way he wanted to talk. Then he went on to Denver to open his headquarters at the Brown Palace Hotel.

There was an amateurlish air around that early headquarters. There was no doubt among those watching that Eisenhower was feeling his way in a strange new world.

Eisenhower made it clear he was leaving the political maneuver and strategy to men who had years of experience in this world to which he was a newcomer. He made it clear, too, that he was going to work through the regular Republican party organization.

To reporters, Eisenhower appeared to be at his best in small groups. Then the Eisenhower charm exerted itself.

On the other side, Stevenson has demonstrated he knows his way through the political forest. He has moved adroitly and with the precision of a smooth professional in familiar surroundings.

Stevenson's first speech accepting the Democratic nomination was hailed by his supporters as a literary gem. They thought it was so good that re-prints and re-broadcasts have been made.

The first move of importance Stevenson made was to shift control of his campaign from the Democratic National Committee. He named his own campaign manager—Wilson Wyatt of Louisville, Ky.—and thus drew away from

Greeks Report Bulgar Action

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—A government spokesman said Monday Greek troops used machineguns and mortars last week to clear a Bulgar detachment from 300-yard-long Gamma Island.

The spokesman said no more Bulgars had tried to land on the tiny island in the Evros River, a patch of grass and brush over which Greece claims sovereignty.

Greek troops fired intermittently for three days after two Greek ultimatums failed to dislodge the Bulgars.

Bulgaria contends shifts in the course of the Evros have made the island her property.

Hoover Blames Taxation For Many Industry Ills

PORTLAND (AP)—Herbert Hoover was fishing in Southern Oregon Monday, a day after celebrating his 78th birthday.

He interrupted the fishing trip Saturday to come to Portland to address the Northwest Engineering Centennial banquet.

He called upon engineers to help methods for lowering costs and increasing production. That would provide part of the solution to spending, inflation and high taxes, he said.

He blamed what he called "ill-considered taxation" for fostering monopolies in industry while "the opportunity for the individual to establish his independent and competitive business is greatly diminished."

He said that is because established industries can write off their losses against taxes, but an individual risking venture capital cannot do so.

The former president called on industry to take the responsibility for training 60,000 new engineers and technologists needed annually by the nation's industry.

He said the high cost of living had reduced the number of engineering students as they no longer can afford such an education.

Hoover departed from his text to criticize the platforms of both major political parties.

"I will say parenthetically the platforms of our two political parties were not written by engineers. They (engineers) do not have that supply of weasel words," he said.

Other speakers at the all-day session included John D. Coleman, Dayton, O., president of the National Society of Professional Engineers; Stanley A. Eason, president of a Kellogg, Idaho, mining concern; J. M. White, president of the Long-Bell Lumber Co. of Longview, Wash.; and Wilfred E. Johnson, general manager of the General Electric Company's nuclear division at the Hanford, Wash., plant.

Johnson said that the most significant event of the past decade
