Debonair Collie Lassie Parts Company With MGM

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — In all the hubbub between Mario Lanza and MGM, a significant event was overlooked. Another top star, the debonair collie Lassie, severed relations with the studio, but on much friendlier terms.

No suspensions, no name-calling, Lassie just licked his boss's hand, they shook his paw and all called it quits. It was a model of star-studio relationship.

But then Lassie has been a model star. In eight years, he (it's really a he, you know) has romped through 15 pictures without a temperamental outburst.

The association has been mutually profitable. The first film, "Lassie Come Home," cost a million and netted three. All of the Lassie films have been money-makers. In return, Lassie was paid $2,500 a week when working and $1,600 when not working. That made him

Washington Awaits Vote

By The Associated Press

Candidates for offices ranging from U. S. Senator down to various local positions got in final licks at their opponents Monday and settled back to await the voters' verdict in Tuesday's primary election.

An estimated 625,000 of the state's 1,320,000 registered voters were expected to cast ballots.

Secretary of State Earl Coe, who made the estimate, said it was an all-time high for a primary.

The polls will be open from 8 a. m. until 8 p. m.

Chief statewide interest centered in three races — the Democratic contest for governor, and in the fights in both parties for nominations for congressman-at-large.

Congressman Hugh B. Mitchell, State Rep. Charles W. Hodde of Colville, and State Sen. Albert Rosellini of Seattle were the chief contenders among Democrats seeking to unseat Republican Gov. Arthur B. Langlie.

State Treasurer Tom Martin and Charles C. Falls of Seattle also were in the race.

Langlie seemed assured of a victory for the Republican nomination over John E. Lydon.

Seven Democrats and eight Republicans battled for the congressman-at-large post and most observers were unwilling to try to pick the winner.

Congressman Henry M. Jackson was unopposed for the Democratic nomination for the U. S. Senate, while incumbent Republican Harry P. Cain faced Carl Viking Holman of Seattle and Ed F. Oldfield of Montesano.

TV Tough On Comedians Says Columnist Red Skelton

By RED SKELTON
 For Erskine Johnson, who is on vacation

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Toward the end of my 1951-52 season on television reports often reached newspapers, wire services and Hollywood columnists that I had been rushed to a hospital.

There was some truth in many of these stories, but hospital treatment was my own idea, not a doctor's. There's no better way to avoid jangling telephone bells and joke-smiths with gags to peddle, and really get down to the business of sound sleeping, than to hide away in a hospital.

Television is a glass furnace. It devours material and comedians with the enthusiasm of a blast furnace eating up iron ore. After 29 weeks before the TV cameras I can honestly say that for the first time in my life I've found out how utterly exhausted a human being can become.

Actors with whom I've tramped in some pretty rugged fields of entertainment won't understand this.

When I played one-night stands, split weeks and week stands, in burlesque, I arrived in town, checked in at a theatrical rooming house, sent out my laundry, showed up at the theater an hour before the matinee, put on my makeup and sat with the gang playing tummy until the stage manager called.

Vaudeville was even easier. An actor would break in his act out of town and, after several weeks of careful polishing, it was set and never again altered. The TV story is something else again.

The problem of building a show, right from the basic lines for gag, blackout scenes, musical interludes and the use of guest acts — as well as timing pacing and spotting routines — becomes the responsibility of the so-called star.

Added to this is the job of coordinating all the activities of every department concerned with putting the show on the air — lighting, camera angles, sets, costumes, rehearsals and even the budgeting headaches.

A comedy show must, of course, begin with comedy material. That's the job of the writers, but any actor who calls himself a comedian without first apologizing must provide the incentive for his writers.

He has to know what complements his style of delivery and personality. He must recognize the gags that may be funny for another comedian but aren't quite right for him.

Just when he thinks he has his show all wrapped up and ready for the cameras, the tape recorder at the final rehearsal begins to give out with bad odors. Perhaps a gag that had the crew and cast rolling in the aisles at the first reading now falls on its face.

If the bad spot happens to be a scene, you're really in trouble. That means not only rewriting, new skit, but casting, rehearsing, and getting a set constructed and

Marine, Sweetheart Are Reunited In NY Taxicab

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York City taxicab was a bit of heaven last night for a Marine sergeant and the pretty Bronx girl he had thought he wouldn't see again before leaving for Korea.

Their meeting in a taxi, with a kiss, ended a week of longing for Sgt. Hugh E. Kidd Jr., 27, of Bronx, and Patricia Hayes, 20, of the Bronx. But the young couple said there will be no engagement just now.

Kidd arrived here yesterday from Camp Lejeune, N. C., on a special and final four-day pass. He leaves for Korea today.

He had spent his Labor Day holiday in a fruitless, 1,600-mile hunt for Patricia, even going to Boston on a tip she might be there. It turned out later she was off for the weekend with some girl friends.

But his pass was up and he had to return, dejected, to camp. Then Marine officials came through with the special pass.

For awhile yesterday circumstances continued to keep them apart. Patricia was waiting in a newspaper office while the sergeant expected her at a television studio.

Then they managed to get together on the phone.

He grabbed a taxi and picked her up outside the newspaper office as newsmen stood by on the sidewalk. It was their first brief moment of privacy.

Minutes later the two returned to the television studio and appeared on the "It's News to Me" show.

Kidd said that they had decided against making any plans because of his impending departure for Korea. But he added:

"As soon as I get back, the first place I'm going to head for is right to New York City."

He and Patricia left for "a quiet dinner together" after the television program.

New Hospital In Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Formal opening of a 49-bed hospital at Lebanon, N. H., will mark completion of the 1,000th hospital built under the Hill-Burton Act.

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, U. S. Surgeon General, will be one of the speakers at the ceremony which will be attended by Governor Leighton, and leaders in the hospital field.

The new hospital, built at a cost of $193,667 to the federal government, replaces an obsolete 21-bed structure, the Federal Surgeon General's office said in an announcement Monday.

The Hill-Burton Act was passed by Congress in 1946 to help communities meet critical needs for hospitals. It now permits the federal government to pay up to two-thirds of their cost. Originally, local interests had to put up at least two-thirds.

FSA Administrator Oscar R. Ewing said the government has put 500 million dollars into such hospitals while states and local communities have contributed about twice that amount.

The FSA said 800 additional new hospitals or additions are in various stages of planning or construction.

The celebration was originally scheduled to take place Sunday, but was postponed by government officials. Truman told public health officials he "hoped to attend." He later advised he could not because of "other commitments."

Because of uncertain weather, the event will be held in the Lebanon union high school auditorium.

William Thomas, Lebanon attorney and secretary of the hospital board of directors, will serve as master of ceremonies.

The invitation list includes Sen. Lister Hill (Ala.), Supreme Court Justice Harold Burton; Sen. Wayne Morse; Reps. Harris Ellsworth and Walter Norblad; Gov. Douglas McKay, and national and state leaders in the hospital and health field.

Local dedication ceremonies were held July 20, and patients moved from the old hospital two weeks later. Now, the new hospital is almost filled to capacity.

Virus In Milk Caused Polio

FREDERICKSBURG, Tex. (AP) — Polio virus in raw milk caused six children in the Paul Pehl family to be stricken with the disease, State Health Officer George W. Cox said yesterday.

"As soon as I get back, the first place I'm going to head for is right to New York City."

He and Patricia left for "a quiet dinner together" after the television program.

Polio virus in raw milk caused six children in the Paul Pehl family to be stricken with the disease, State Health Officer George W. Cox said yesterday.

"As soon as I get back, the first place I'm going to head for is right to New York City."

He and Patricia left for "a quiet dinner together" after the television program.

The polio infection was undoubtedly carried in raw milk," Dr. Cox said. "The polio virus entered the milk during the milk process."

Six of the Pehl children are in a San Antonio Hospital with the disease. The only child not afflicted is a 13-year-old daughter.

Dr. Cox said that one of the Pehl boys apparently got the virus from a close friend who was stricken with polio before the Pehls. He said the Pehls milked their own cows and the chore passed from one evidently to the other.

Dr. Cox said that the Pehl boy passed the virus to others in his family when, in milking the cows, he contaminated the raw milk.

Had the milk been pasteurized, Dr. Cox said, the family probably would not have been stricken.

The health officer said the Pehl inspection does not throw any added light on how polio is transmitted.

Sympathetic citizens of Gillespie County have contributed $3,200 to aid the stricken family.
