Death Comes To Happy Man

NEW YORK (U.P.) — He stepped off the plane at New York International airport, his pulse quickening at the prospect of seeing his wife and boy, Capt. Martin Brent was happy, perhaps too happy.

It was the second time the 30-year-old Air Force officer had come home from war.

In World War II he had flown nearly 100 missions, been repeatedly decorated, shot down and badly wounded in one raid, rescued and hospitalized for nine months.

After that, he had begun studying to become an accountant, only to be called back to service last year. Now, after 27 missions in Korea, he was home again.

He made it last Sunday, just barely in time to celebrate the seventh birthday of his son Michael.

The captain's heart raced as the taxicab carried him across town to his Manhattan apartment.

Everything, the old familiar sights, looked good — even the New York air smelled delicious.

They met him at the door. Shirley, his wife, hugging and kissing him, Michael jumping up and down, yelling for joy. The captain was in the clouds with happiness.

He had a surprise gift for the boy — the headphones he had worn during all his wartime flights. Michael danced with delight, tried the headphones on his own chubby little head.

As the captain watched, smiling, a stab of pain cut through his chest.

Then again, his wife guided him to a bed, and called a doctor. When the doctor arrived, happy Captain Brent was dead from a heart attack.

Journal Issues Big Paper

PORTLAND (U.P.) — The Oregon Journal issued its largest weekly paper today, a 112-page Golden Jubilee edition.

The Journal was founded 50 years ago as an afternoon daily by C. S. Jackson and is now published by his son, P. L. Jackson. Three of the special editions four sections are devoted to the present and future and one, telling the story chiefly with photographs, is concerned with the past half century.

In recent weeks a letter to the Journal from Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois has been widely discussed. President Truman, in sending congratulations to the Journal today, said he found the newspaper's support of Stevenson for the presidency "an eminently fitting way for you to celebrate your golden anniversary."

JOURNAL REPORTER Robert Morse, who edited the anniversary section under the direction of Managing Editor David W. Eyre, estimated he spent 150 hours just looking through 6,000 photographs.
