'AND DON'T GO NEAR THE WATER' Cole of California previewed its 1953 line of swim suits in Los Angeles and faced the facts of life—there are women who swim and there are those who have no idea of going near the water. Three of those that a swimmer would not allow herself to be greased up in are, left to right, "Treasure Chest" a nylon latex with a treasure of jewels, crystal and lace across the chest and a gossamer coat that can be removed; "Zsa Zsa" a velvet affair, loaded with plenty of "ice," and looks like the upperhalf of a formal evening gown; and "Sheer Formality" a one-piece linen and organza shorts suit, plus a removable jacket.

$30 Shirts, $20,000 Homes Enter Bolich Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Daniel A. Bolich, a $30 shirt man who spent $115,000 while earning only $32,000 in one five-year period while working for the Internal Revenue Bureau, is facing trial on charges of income tax evasion, a $50,000 fine. Bolich, a big man of commanding voice and florid countenance resigned last November as assistant revenue commissioner after 29 years service with the bureau. The resignation came in the midst of a congressional inquiry. Bolich, 32, said he was in ill health. In Brooklyn yesterday, a special federal grand jury indicted Bolich. It accused him of cheating the revenue bureau out of $7,444 in personal income taxes. It said he paid $6,883 taxes on reported income of $54,771 from 1946 through 1950, when the total should have been $83,314 and the taxes $14,328. If convicted, Bolich would face a maximum penalty of 25 years imprisonment and a $50,000 fine. He was not reached for comment. Bolich was an unwilling witness earlier this year before a congressional subcommittee looking into tax scandals. He refused to answer any questions. During the inquiry, Bolich expensed a man with $31.50 shirts, expensive cars and two luxurious furnished homes—one of them, valued at $20,000, an admitted gift. Investigators revealed that, during the five-year period, 1946-50, Bolich spent $115,000 when his government salary totaled only $32,000. Bolich refused to explain these or other matters when summoned last April before the House ways and means subcommittee investigating the revenue bureau. His claim of constitutional privilege to remain silent because of possible self-incrimination brought him a tongue-lashing by Chairman King (D-Calif.), King, asserting the testimony about Bolich's income and associations indicated "unusual, if not suspicious" circumstances, told him: "Every American has a right to be disappointed with the failure of a man of your ability and ex-

Ex-King's Wink No Link In Royal 'Romance' Chain

By JOAN FONTAINE
 For Erskine Johnson, who is on vacation in Hollywood — (INEA) — Let's nip it in the bud before the "King and I" story gets around in Hollywood.

It happened in the dining room of the Palace Hotel in Madrid a few days after I had arrived in Spain to make "Dea in eron Nights," with Louis Jourdan, Binnie Barnes, Godfrey Tearle and Joan Collins, for Mike Frankovich. My daughter, Martita, kept turning her head to look at an elderly gentleman a few tables away.

He winked at Martita — once, twice, three times.

She blushed and hid her face in her napkin.

Finally the distinguished-looking man left, without so much as a wistful leer my way, and I was told by a waiter that he was ex-King Umberto of Italy.

This, then, is little Martita's "romance," not mine.

As for me, let me paraphrase Stevenson:

The world is so full of a number of things
 And I'm doing fine without princes or kings.

On my last trip to Europe, I was linked with every title but Baron Leone and Duke Ellington.

Red Soldier Steals Truck Flees 100 Miles To UN Lines

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — A freedom-hung Chinese soldier bolted from Communist lines late yesterday in a stolen truck, crashed through Red and Allied roadblocks, and surrendered to U. S. military police.

The soldier drove about 100 road miles through Communist territory to reach the Allied lines. He started about 20 miles south of the Red Korean capital of Pyongyang.

The Chinese nearly ran down four Red Korean riflemen who tried to stop him as he raced his truck through the Panmunjom neutral zone at 45 miles an hour.

The soldier was the second Communist to surrender this week through the neutral zone surrounding the Panmunjom truce center.

A North Korean security officer charged with preventing surrenders gave himself up to American guards several days ago. He walked through his own guards disguised as a sergeant.

An Eighth Army announcement in Seoul of the surrender gave few details.

"It was still unknown how he managed to get through the heavily guarded northern edge of the truce corridor," the Army said. "But it is presumed that he forced his way through by driving at high speed as he did when he entered the American sector."

Crunching across the military police road block south of Panmunjom, the determined Chinese sped across a narrow bridge, smashed through the crossbar across it and sped on.

He finally stopped at the second military police check point about a mile farther south. It was not clear whether or not he also smashed through this roadblock.

Apparently, an Army spokesman said, the Communist were not chasing the soldier and no one accompanied him.

The soldier was being questioned by Army officers.

Klamath Pilots Protest Radio Frequency Change

Many aviation enthusiasts in this area plan to make an organized protest at a meeting here tomorrow against a government proposal to change airways communications from low frequency to VHF (very high frequency) ranges.

The proposed change stems from a Congressional directive that the Civil Aeronautics Administration switch all low frequency stations, such as the one at Municipal Airport here, to VHF.

Local fliers in protesting the switch, claim VHF is not nearly so efficient in mountainous terrain as is low frequency and that changing to VHF here would greatly hamper aerial communications. They say VHF waves travel only in straight lines and are blocked by mountains or other obstructions between transmitters and receivers. Obstructions do not block the low frequency waves. This means that fliers in this area can maintain radio contact with CAA at the airport despite intervening mountains, whereas with VHF the mountains would cut off radio contact.

Babe Reeder and Doug Hower, president and vice president respectively of the Klamath Air Search and Rescue Unit, are among leaders in the fight against the switch to VHF.

They are encouraging all local fliers to attend a meeting called here tomorrow by R. D. Bedinger, CAA's regional administrator. The hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. tomorrow at the Pilots Club.

Lloyd (Pop) Newlun, dean of Klamath Basin fliers, this morning offered a graphic argument against the switch from low frequency to VHF. Yesterday after-
