Kilgore Files $2 Million Suit

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Sen. Harley M. Kilgore (D-W. Va.), has filed a two-million dollar damage suit against the Charleston Daily Mail.

He started his suit in circuit court Tuesday a few hours after the Mail published a reprint of an article about Kilgore which appeared originally in the American Mercury.

The senator last spring filed a one million libel suit against the Charleston Gazette in connection with a story on his political plans. The Daily Mail's reprint was bannered under an eight-column headline on the front page. The article was credited to William Bradford Huie, "by courtesy of American Mercury magazine."

There was no immediate comment from the newspaper's management on Kilgore's suit.

The earlier suit against the Gazette was based on a story which said Kilgore would retire from his race for re-election.

Hot Fence Stops Beavers

ASTORIA (AP) — The owners of a duck lake on Clatsop Plains finally got rid of beavers that persistently dammed the lake's outlet.

Marsh Hoffman, Robert Hawkins and Mayor Rex Baldwin, Gearhart, the lake's owners, reported that a simple electric fence proved the solution to the beaver dam problem which has plagued them for years.

It was an unattributed story published during the heat of the May 13 primary campaign.

The case is pending in Kanawha Circuit Court. After Kilgore filed particulars in the case, the Gazette made answer giving former Congressman Andrew Edmiston as the source of its information. The newspaper denied there was any malicious intent in publishing the story.

Kilgore won renomination and is now running against former Sen. Chapman Revercomb in the Nov. 4 election.
