GRANTS PASS (U) — Four men left here Wednesday by plane for Lake County to join the search for Louis Ringuette of Grants Pass, Josephine County sheriff's deputy, apparently missing on a deer hunting trip. Ringuette left here alone Oct. 6 to hunt in Lake County. He was due back Saturday or Sunday and had a reputation for adhering to schedule. Sheriff Lloyd Lewis said, Lewis, concerned over the deputy's failure to return, asked Lake County authorities to investigate. He said District Attorney Robert L. Welch of Lake County telephoned him Wednesday a truck and a horse, believed to belong to Ringuette, were found about 35 miles from Lakeview. Sheriff's Deputy George Eckstein, Son Ray and Bruce Lathrop, all of Grants Pass and friends of Ringuette, left here in a plane piloted by George Spalding. Grants Pass and vicinity — Fair through Thursday. High of 85 Wednesday and 82 Thursday. Low Wednesday night 38.

150 Celebrate Ike Birthday

About 150 guests gathered last night at the Eisenhower Headquarters to honor the 62nd birthday anniversary of the Republican candidate for president. Guests listened to the 35 minute broadcast by the candidate over a local radio station, given by Eisenhower from San Antonio, Texas. A brief sketch of the candidate's early life, to Frank Tucker, manager of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce, placed several plans numbers and Bob Mest play the saxophone. Charles Baine led community singing. A Dutch Auction of articles donated by local businessmen brought in a considerable sum for campaign uses. George Proctor, chairman of the Klamath County Citizens for Eisenhower Committee emceed the program. Birthday cake and coffee were served.

Race Men Plan Movie Bans

SALEM (U) — An initiative measure to outlaw the Sunday showing of motion pictures in Oregon was filed Tuesday by employees of the Portland Meadows race track. The sponsor, Edward C. Foss, Portland, said he represents the track employees who want revenge against the theater operators who are supporting the November ballot measure to ban pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog racing. "These theater owners," Foss said, "are helping the Oregon Council of Churches in its fight against racing."

"We have nothing against the churches, but we think the theaters are unfair when they put anti-racing propaganda on the screen. We expect the churches will help us, too, in getting our measure passed to stop the Sunday showing of motion pictures."

This new initiative, which would place the ban on motion pictures on Sunday into the state constitution, would be on the November, 1954, election ballot if some 26,000 signatures are obtained. Foss said he works at Portland Meadows, and that 200 employees and former employees are behind his move.

Milk Control Law

control administration. In the view of most distributors and of the larger dairymen, the milk control law has stabilized the industry for them, assured them of making an acceptable return on their investment, provided restrictions against unfair competition, and furnished the consuming public with a steady supply of a very essential food item.

The proposition to be voted upon Nov. 4, Ballot Measure 332-333, would, in essence, do away with all of the 1933 milk control law, and re-enact parts of it. For instance, it would do away with minimum prices at the retail level, at all levels except for the producer. The dairymen would still be given a minimum price for their product, but from there on out the price business would be subject to competition. Milk now sells for 24 cents a quart here in Klamath Falls, whether it's delivered by the milkman or bought at the store. That's for milk of 3.5 minimum butterfat content. Richer milk is higher.

By doing away with the retail price minimum, there is a possibility that the retail price might go down, at least that a carton of milk bought at the store might be a penny or two cheaper than one delivered to the door.

That's one reason a large grocery chain, Safeway Stores, is actively plugging for the repeal of the present controls and enactment of the measure on the ballot. Safeway says it can sell milk cheaper than the price it is now required to charge.

Opponents believe Safeway wants to sell milk as a "loss leader" to pull shoppers into its stores, and that such marketing will jeopardize smaller stores that can't afford to do it.

The proposed law also will do away with the quota system, which, people backing the bill say, stifles competition by limiting the number of people who can get into the dairy business. The new law, if it becomes law, would allow all dairymen who meet Grade A milk standards to sell their milk for top Grade A milk prices, according to its backers.

The type of organization which administers the state's milk control law would also be changed. At present administration is a seven-person Board of Agriculture, which is composed of six representatives of various phases of the agricultural industry, plus one member representing the consumer. The board hires an administrator at $6,600 a year. The change would be to one-man control, a $7,200 a year milk control administrator, appointed by the governor. The milk control law as it now is subject to criticism on several counts, some of which probably are justified. It can be criticized as a "fair trade" law which prevents financial returns for dairymen and for distributors, whose capital outlays must necessarily be large.

But it has its good points, also. It tends to stabilize an industry that is vital to the public health, and it tends to assure adequate financial returns for dairy farmers and for distributors, whose capital outlays must necessarily be large.

There is one misconception about the new law, and about the old, which should be cleared up. That is the theory that the old milk control law governs the amount of butterfat in the consumers' milk, and that passage of the proposed new law would mean richer milk.

Actually, nothing in the present law sets a maximum amount of butterfat that can be in milk. What it does do is control the price according to butterfat content. So right now, in Klamath Falls, milk of 3.5 per cent butterfat content sells for 24 cents a quart; milk of up to 4 per cent butterfat sells for 26 cents.

What the new law might do, by doing away with retail price minimums, is to encourage distributors to make their milk richer to keep the prices up, and to compete for customers. There's no assurance of that.

Neither does the present law, or the proposed law regulate sanitation standards or minimum quality standards. Separate state and local laws govern that phase of the industry.

This milk control matter is an extremely vital one to all the people of Oregon.

A yes vote on Ballot measure 332-333 tosses out the present system of control, and institutes the proposed new system. A no vote keeps the present milk control law in effect.

Work Aid Due Korea Vets

The Klamath Falls office of the Oregon State Unemployment Compensation Commission, 242 Main Street, will start taking claims for Unemployment Insurance for Korean veterans on and after Oct. 20. All veterans applying for such assistance must have certain documentary material on hand when applying: (1) Social Security Number; (2) Discharge papers or photostats; (3) DD form 214—Report of separation from armed forces of the United States.

It is pointed out that benefits under this program will not be paid to veterans while they are drawing money out of pay under Title V of the assistance act or during schooling or training under Title II of the act.

This program will in no way have any similarity to the veterans readjustment allowance for World War II veterans. The Veterans Administration will not handle this program. It will be administered by the U. S. Department of Labor, through the unemployment insurance offices of the various states, territories of Alaska and Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands.

For full information, veterans should call at the local employment office.

Gas Station Bandit Busy

Another downtown service station was broken into last night, the fourth in less than three weeks. George Randall, owner of the Monarch Texaco station at 6th and Walnut, reported to City Police that apparently nothing was taken from the place, although the office was ransacked.

Entry was made through a door on the east side of the building. In recent days three stations on Main Street have been burglarized, with more profit to the prowlers than was realized in last night's robbery. A considerable amount of cash was taken from Cloake's Chevron station, 12th and Main; Robinson's Shell station, 11th and Main; and Coleman's Union Station, 11th and Main.

S.P. Wins Ad Award

For the second successive year, Southern Pacific railroad has been declared winner of the national "Socrates Award" for outstanding transportation advertising, according to announcement by Transportation Ad Views of New York City, donor of the award. The competition, open to all North American transportation companies—air, rail and bus—based on month-to-month judging of each carrier's newspaper advertising throughout the year. "Southern Pacific Company has maintained a freshness and originality in presentation," the announcement said. "In addition to promoting its own business, the company has devoted much ad space, with equally good treatment, to the improvement of community and national interests. Its policy of advertising has been beneficial to many businesses, industries and individuals."

Youth Suffers Head Injury

Pedro Colley, 14, was taken to Klamath Valley Hospital from the EURE field house last night suffering from a head injury. Young Colley apparently had been injured while making a tackle during football practice. He was taken to the hospital by Kaler's ambulance.

season 886 cars have been shipped from Klamath Basin points, 165 by truck and 701 by rail. Idaho, meanwhile, has shipped more than 10,000 cars this season, more than 3,000 more than last year. Oregon generally is 600 ahead of last year, Washington is 2,000 ahead, Idaho 3,000 more and Colorado 2,200 more.

Nationally shipments to date last year were about 81,000, but so far this year about 88,000 cars have been put out to market.

ALSKE — The 11,000-acre (est.) alske crop which has but a few of this season's fields left to be combined. Yields there have been reported as high as 1,200 and better pounds per acre, with some unusually high yields coming off Tulelake fields. Local clover experts figure this year's crop every bit as great as last year's record breaker.

Final final tonnages haven't been recorded. Last year's crop amounted to almost 5 1/2 million pounds, about 20 per cent of the nation's total crop.

Predictions on this year's crop may put the Klamath production total up to 40 per cent of the nation's total crop. Weak price reports are due at least partially to lower prices being asked on competing small seeds. Alfalfa seed is down 15 to 20 cents below last year, accordingly offered on competing small in the East where alske is purchased.

The Canadian crop, which apparently hit for the first time in five years, is drawing only 22 cents to the growers. Dealer's prices are reported at about 34 cents, but Canadian handling charges, duty and freight reach about 12 cents per pound. Alske support price here is 25 cents. One buyer here reports his shipping, cleaning and handling costs are about five cents, and with the 34-cent dealer's price in the East, the local price would be about 29 cents.
