Today's Women

Any housewife, says Helen Scott of Astoria, Ore., can have a successful business career at home. Because every woman has one thing she can do better than anybody else. Helen, who is in private life Mrs. Marlin P. Schullz, wife of a sales executive, found that she could bake better pies and cakes than anybody she knew, and on that has founded a successful business. She started it several years ago when her husband was convalescing from a serious and costly operation. After sounding out a number of her friends, Helen started taking week-end orders for baked goods, worked three days a week filling the orders, and netted a profit of $40 to $45 a week until her husband was on his feet again. Helen Scott spoke recently to a group of housewives in Buffalo, N. Y., at a meeting sponsored jointly by the advertising women of Buffalo and the Women's Division of the N. Y. State Department of Commerce, and said: "To you who are interested in perfecting your skills and talents, no matter how burdened you may be with household responsibilities, life can be turned into a joyous victory if only you have the will to make it so." After starting a successful home-baking business, Helen won more plaudits and also dollars for her book, "Baking for Profit," and now is embarking on a business of making and marketing frozen pies. Maybe you've been cherishing a recipe for Aunt Martha's bread-and-butter pickles, or grandmother's elderberry jam. Maybe you have a skilled hand with a sewing machine or a pair of knitting needles. Maybe you're a renowned party-giver, or a genius at entertaining children. Perhaps you have a knack of making and designing children's clothes, or have stumbled on a cosmetic formula which can be made at home. Any of these can be money in the bank, says Helen Scott. All you have to do is perfect them—make them better than anybody else—and then market them.

"The Responsibility of Parenthood" will be the topic of discussion. Everyone is cordially invited. RIVERSIDE MRS. ALEXANDER LUFT A chili dinner Tuesday evening, Oct. 21, started the Riverside PTA meeting off with a bang. Highlights, following the dinner, were an address by Carroll Howe, Superintendent of Klamath County Schools and a talk by Jack Smith, Field Scout Executive of Boy Scouts of America. Howe explained two measures appearing on the November ballot that are backed by the PTA because they are for the betterment of Oregon public schools. He pointed out that the measure for Making Superintendent of Public Instruction Appointive would enable the position to be filled by a more qualified person. Howe, speaking on the School District Reorganization measure said, "It has a far-reaching impact. The impact will probably be felt less in Klamath County than in other counties because we already have an organized district similar to the proposed measure. School District Reorganization will provide an opportunity for a better educational program throughout the State of Oregon." Smith explained the purpose of the Cub Scout program and the way to go about setting up a Cub Scout group for the Riverside boys from 8 to 10 years of age. Dr. Harry Fredricks, program chairman, explained the annual school census project and announced that Riverside PTA is going to take the Riverside district census. He asked volunteers from each block to contact Mrs. Carlson within the next few days. Presiding at the meeting was Mrs. Axel Carlson, president. Dr. Fredricks announced that our next meeting will stress Education Week and Dr. R. T. Lindley, Klamath Falls optometrist, will speak on the Coordinated Classroom, regarding lighting, seating, decorating, etc., effects on children. The next meeting is scheduled for Nov. 18. CONGER Girl Scout troops 11 and 21, from Conger and Fremont schools were presented in a Court of Awards at the monthly meeting of Conger PTA, Wednesday evening, Oct. 15. The meeting opened with Judy Hull, Susan Farrell and Sharon Ross presenting the colors and Pat Wilson leading the flag salute. Mrs. Gene Woods then conducted a brief business meeting. Lights were dimmed and sixteen girls formed a candlelight procession from the back of the auditorium to the stage. Girl Scout pledge and laws were repeated and the girls sang softly the Campfire Prayer and As the Flames Ascend, accompanied by their leader, Mrs. Charles McFarlan. Lights were turned on, the girls came by one extinguished their candles and left the stage to receive their awards.
