Demos Hope For Victory in Oregon State Vote

(This is the first of four articles about the candidates in Oregon's general election.)

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR.

SALEM (AP) — It's been so long since the Democrats had control of Oregon's state government that most people now living can't remember it.

There hasn't been a Democratic secretary of state since 1878. The last Democratic attorney general served in 1895. The only Democratic state official now is Walter J. Pearson, state treasurer.

The Democrats now think they have a good chance to win those three offices next Tuesday. They claim they have the strongest ticket they have had in many years, and many Republicans freely admit that.

Those three positions are the only state offices to be filled at the general election. The campaigns for these offices, while overshadowed by the hectic presidential race, have been hard.

The Democrats hope the presidential race will lure sometimes reluctant Democratic voters to the polls.

It's an odd campaign. While each of the candidates is working hard, I couldn't find in touring the state in the past few days that people were very much interested in these state offices. Their eyes are focused on the bitter presidential struggle.

As far as these candidates for state offices are concerned, nobody seems to be very mad at anybody.

All of the candidates have distinguished records.

Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry, the Ashland pear grower who was appointed five years ago by ex-Gov. John Hall and who was re-elected in a landslide, is a Republican who plans to run for governor in two years.

His opponent is Mrs. Edith S. Green, an attractive Portland housewife. She is a Democrat and has taught school, held high positions in the state Parent-Teacher Association, been active in the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women, and has done a lot of work for charity.

Mrs. Green's main charges have been that Newbry's motor vehicle department is too expensive, and that Newbry's work on the State Board of Control hasn't resulted in efficiency in running the state institutions and tax commission.

She also criticizes Newbry for his opposition to the newly created State Department of Finance. She claims this department, which is under Gov. Douglas McKay, is efficient and a big improvement, but Newbry argues that the department is wasteful.

Newbry was a prominent state senator when he became secretary of state. He says his department is run economically and that he has done many things to better serve the public, including his establishing of branch offices over the state, and the staggered automobile license plate system.

Democratic State Treasurer Walter J. Pearson is running for the state senate from Multnomah County, a position he had before he was elected treasurer. The two aspirants for his treasurer job are Sigfrid Unander, young Portlander who has been high in Republican party circles; and Francis Lambert, Democrat who was Multnomah County treasurer for 11 years.

Neither Unander nor Lambert has been cussing out the other. Each has been stressing his own qualifications.

Unander is a protege of ex-Gov. Charles A. Sprague, Salem publisher who now is an alternate delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. Unander was a secretary to Sprague when the latter was governor.

He has been state Republican chairman, resigning to run for treasurer. Unander ran for the same job four years ago, but was defeated narrowly in the primary.

Unander knows a lot about money. He inherited a lot of it, and has managed the estates. He had a brilliant war record, serving 39 months overseas and winning a chestful of decorations.

Lambert, like Unander, is a member of a pioneer family. His main argument as to why he should be state treasurer is that running the state treasury isn't too different from being Multnomah County treasurer, so he's experienced.

Lambert also has been active in civic affairs, leading symphony, Red Cross, infantile paralysis, cancer and war bond campaigns.

The Democrats believe their best chance lies in the attorney general contest, which they came close to winning four and eight years ago.

Here, the battle might resolve itself in a contest between Multnomah County and the upstate counties. That's what the Democrats are hoping.

Republican Attorney General George Neuner is quitting after nine years of office. The two men after his job are District Attorney John B. McCourt of Multnomah County, Republican, and State Rep. Robert Y. Thornton, Tillamook Democrat.

Both are running on a clean government platform. McCourt says he has kept Multnomah County free of rackets and vice, while Thornton promises to keep vice, racketeers and gamblers out of Oregon.

McCourt, son of a former state Supreme Court justice, served five terms in the state House of Representatives. He was a county deputy district attorney four years before becoming district attorney.

Thornton, a young man, served in the 1951 House of Representatives. While McCourt is a veteran of World War I, Thornton served in World War II.

The Tillamook lawyer served in Japan as an intelligence officer, and knows the Jpanese language well.

In fact, he knows Japanese so well that in Malheur County, he spoke to Japanese-Americans in their native language.

Thornton is drawing considerable Republican support. Some of his hardest workers in upstate counties belong to the GOP.

JIMMY BARNES, 111 Sheldon, is a candidate for a City Council position from Ward 3 (Mills Addition). He is making his first venture into elective politics and seeks to replace Mark Smith as councilman from that ward. Smith is not running.

Dairy Costs Reported Up

Production costs and prices to producers have both increased in the past year, the Oregon State Extension Service reports in its weekly dairy market review. However, an increase in supply is lagging behind an increase in sales.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the average standard milk price delivered to homes in 56 cities of the nation was 24.2 cents in August, nearly five percent above a year ago. Another government report showed in early October Portland's 22 cents per quart for delivered milk was below prices being paid by residents of 80 of 111 cities. Seventeen cities had the same price as Portland, and 19 were lower.

A year earlier 47 cities had higher prices, 47 had lower prices than Portland. Store prices are now higher in 64 cities than Portland, are the same in 15 and lower in 31.

Top grades of butter are continuing at 79 cents a pound, and grade B butter is unchanged at 76 cents. Cheese prices are mostly unchanged.

GRAIN MARKET

Wheat markets showed stronger price trends in the major terminals of the nation. At Portland this week cash sales have been $2.56 per bushel. Feed barley markets showed mostly higher price trends, with West Coast markets running from 50 cents to 1.00 a ton higher. Portland quotations are from 70.00 to 70.50 per ton, and is reported quiet there. Offerings are scarce, with large carlot receipts mostly from previous contracts.

The brewing barley market remained dull, with practically no trade and prices only nominal.

The Portland oat prices showed a stronger price trend during the last week, with trading light and offerings small. This week they topped mostly at 69.50 to 70.00 a ton. This is unchanged to 50 cents higher than a week ago.

German SS Troops Meet

VERDEN, Germany (AP) — Americans including Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower were vilified at the first big postwar reunion of Hitler's SS troopers Sunday night.

They cheered wildly a former German general who urged the war veterans to refuse to take up arms again as long as Allied prisons still hold "so-called German war criminals."

Hermann Ramcke, the former general, addressed 4,000 onetime members of Hitler's "Elite Guard" at a rally whose announced purpose was to clarify the fate of SS men still listed as missing.

Ramcke, a popular wartime leader, said "if our soldiers are convicted as war criminals then it was also a war crime when the Allies bombed unprotected German cities and when the Allies now invent atom bombs."

Shouts of approval almost drowned him out. Some of his listeners yelled that Eisenhower is a pig-dog. The German word they used is Schweinehund.

The forme paratroop general — himself released last year from a French war crimes prison—said 11,500 German soldiers had been involved in war crimes and denazification trials. He asserted their prison sentences has totaled 4,166 years.

Another rally leader, former SS General Felix Steiner, called a hurried news conference later and stressed that Ramcke was a guest speaker and did not speak for him and other SS veterans.

Earlier Steiner had urged the rally to support Allied plans for West European unity.

English Mobs Beat Airmen

WARRINGTON, Eng. (AP) — The U. S. Air Force has put the entire city of Manchester out of bounds for American airmen because of two recent gang attacks on U. S. Service personnel.

Brig. Gen. Robert C. Oliver, commander of the big U. S. air depot at nearby Burtonwood, said Monday the ban would stay in effect until further notice.

Manchester, city of 735,000 and Britain's cotton capital, has been the scene of frequent Communist Party demonstrations against the stationing of American airmen in this country. There are 5,000 airmen at Burtonwood alone.

Two weeks ago two Air Force MP's, armed only with billy clubs, were attacked by a gang of toughs with knives and razors and were badly beaten and cut. Last Friday two more MP's were similarly attacked.

The Manchester police have made no arrests in connection with the assaults.

Italian Police Bar Churches

MILAN, Italy (AP)—A preacher of the Church of Christ complained last night of renewed interference by Italy's police with the American-led Protestant sect.

Melvin J. Pownall of Coatesville, Pa., said police barred members of his congregation from entering a building yesterday where services were to be held in nearby Alessandria and threatened him with arrest.
