Man Accused In Chester Case Says He Plans To Leave Town

CHESTER, Calif. (AP)—Louis Edmond Blair, questioned and released in the $7,120 robbery-massacre of a grocer and three children, is home again—but vowing to leave Chester forever. Blair and his petite wife returned Wednesday. His first visit was to his movie theater—next door to the market of Guard Young, who was slain with two daughters and their playmate Oct. 10. Then Blair inserted this advertisement in a newspaper: "For sale, theater . . . Priced for a quick sale. . . Blair, who had been staying with his father at Larkspur, Calif., since he was freed in Reno last week, said he and his wife don't know where they'll go, but, "I could never live here again. My wife and I want to forget all about this place. I couldn't open up that theater with the store next door—I could never forget those kids."

Blair said he will leave in a week "at the most" despite a petition signed by 185 residents—almost a third of Chester's population—urging him to remain. "The petition is heartening. I appreciate it, but too much has happened for me to stay," he explained. Blair was arrested near Reno the same day 3 1/2-year-old Sondra Young, sole survivor of the brutal killings, told her story to police. Blair and Young had quarreled over water and parking rights on their adjoining properties, authorities freed him after Reno lie detector tests proved inconclusive. Plumas County Sheriff Mel H. Schooler said there were no developments in the search for the killers.

New Business For Eugene

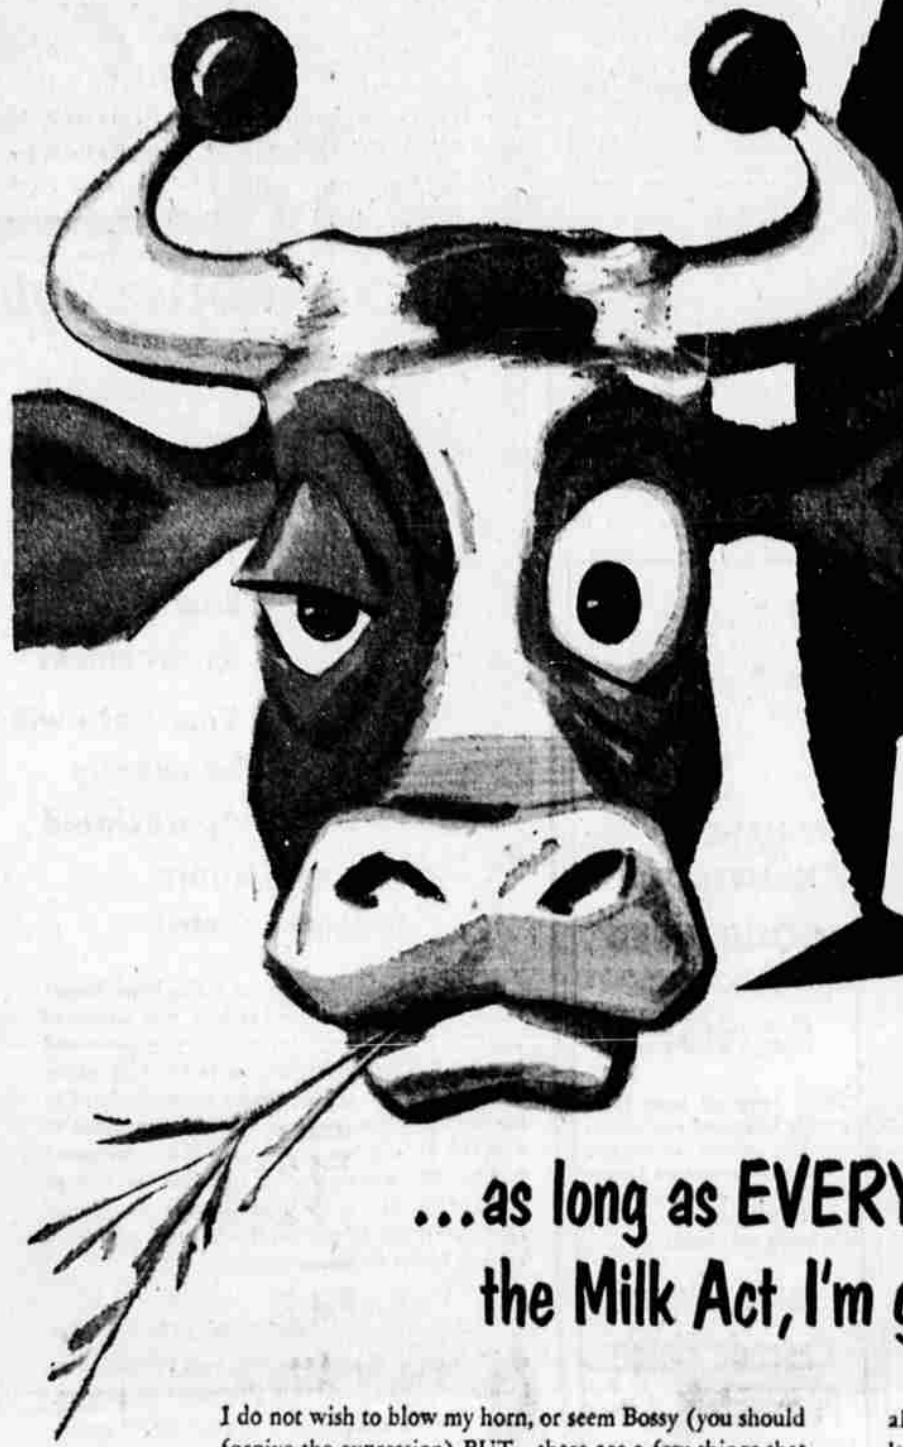

EUGENE (AP)—Plans for construction of a $600,000 neighborhood shopping center in Eugene were revealed here this week when two real estate men requested the City Council for a zoning change in a two-block area near the new high school. The real estate men are Paul Campbell, Eugene, and George F. Crow, Portland. They showed the council members tentative drawings which call for two block-long buildings, partial second stories and a pedestrian overpass across a street which runs between the buildings. The City Council delayed a decision. The area is now zoned for multiple-family dwellings.

"NOW SEE HERE, MR. MANGAN!"

...as long as EVERYBODY has jumped into the Milk Act, I'm gonna have my say!

I do not wish to blow my horn, or seem Bossy (you should forgive the expression) BUT...there are a few things that voters should hear right from the horse's mouth (how did that get in here!).

In the first place I'M boss of the milk business, Mr. M., and there are a couple of things about me you'd better get straight.

One is that I'm a mighty expensive critter to feed in the winter time. It's a lot cheaper and easier for dairy farmers to let me "dry up" when feed is expensive. But under the present milk law they can't do it. They're obligated to furnish a specified amount of milk to the market the year 'round. That's called a "quota", pal. Makes a steady supply of milk for consumers. (Heavens to Ferdinand, Mr. Mangan, you should be able to figure that one out!) But under the initiative you're promoting, dairy farmers can furnish as much or as little milk as they darn please! What happens to the steady supply of milk, then? Looks like you might be flooded in the spring and short in the fall and winter, doesn't it, Mr. Mangan? How much will people have to pay for my milk during that winter shortage?

And another thing we better get straight is this SANITATION thing, Buster. I do not wish to seem quarrelsome, but the milk law has plenty to do with sanitation. It's really quite simple.

You see, it costs a lot of money for a dairy farmer to buy all the sanitation equipment he needs. Under the present law he can afford to do it because he knows that if he fulfills his part of the bargain (to furnish a steady supply of good milk) he'll have a market for his milk.

BUT under the initiative you like so much, the dairy farmer loses what little security he now has. Maybe there's somebody to buy his milk and maybe there isn't. Would you make a big investment in equipment under those circumstances, Mr. Mangan? I don't know about you, but us cows can understand that YOUR INITIATIVE CAN WRECK THE DAIRY FARMER'S INCENTIVE TO STAY IN THE DAIRY BUSINESS!

All in all, Mr. Mangan, to us cows who KNOW the milk business in Oregon, it looks like your initiative won't help anybody... except maybe help your out-of-state grocery chain to dominate the milk supply of Oregon consumers. We certainly don't see how you can help consumers by interfering with the steady supply of milk, or sanitary standards. Fact is, speaking for us cows, I think it would be bully if the voters sustain the present law...after all, it has worked for 19 years to bring people a steady supply of good milk at low prices. You can't improve on that!

P.S. Incidentally, Mr. Mangan, it looks to me like a bunch of us cows will suddenly become beef if your initiative passes. That means a shorter supply of milk, a weakened dairy industry, uncertain prices... and besides, I'm too young to die!

* Mr. Mangan is division manager of a prominent out-of-state-owned grocery chain.

WHO "never had it so good"?

Is it the average family who, according to the government's own Bureau of Labor, has to spend $400 a year out of savings to make ends meet?

Is it the Washington insider who cleaned up on grain speculation and war surplus?
