WALGREEN DRUG

The contest between Adlai Stevenson and Dwight Eisenhower was mild compared to other presidential races in the past, remarked Irving Stone, noted author and expert on presidential history.

"Of course, there was a lot of name-calling this year, particularly in the last two weeks. That happens in every election. By that time the campaigners are like automata, hurling through space; they say things out of anger and fatigue that they really don't mean."

"But at least we have reached the point where wives are no longer brought into the arena for slaughter. The most shocking example of this was in the 1828 election between Andrew Jackson and John Quincy Adams."

"Stone wrote a biography of Mrs. Jackson, called 'The President's Lady.' It has just been filmed with Susan Hayward and Charlton Heston as the Jacksons. The story tells how the 1828 campaign killed the President's wife."

"Henry Clay, who was running the Adams campaign, realized Jackson had tremendous popularity," said Stone. "Clay decided the only way to beat Jackson was through his wife."

Rachel Jackson had previously been married to a cruel landowner from whom she fled. She heard later that he had divorced her, and so she married Jackson. But the divorce was found to be incomplete, and her former husband then

NATO Nations Set Standard

PARIS — The 14 NATO nations have set out on an ambitious program of standardizing their medical equipment and training.

Looking toward the possibility of another world war, their aim is to make the military medical supplies of each nation alike. Thus, a British stretcher would fit in an American ambulance and a Turkish needle would fit in a French syringe. They don't now.

The same thing would be done in training techniques. The Danish elbow lift method of resuscitation, for example, would be taught all military medical officers, nurses and corporals of all 14 countries. It is rated as the best method to-day and has been widely adopted in the United States.

No larger has been set for complete standardization. In fact, Capt. Cecil Cogging of the U. S. Navy said in an interview that it would be a gradual process taking two to three years.

The important thing is that the military medical chiefs of 11 of the 14 nations already have agreed, in principle, on the plan.

LOAN SOUGHT

THE DALLES — The Wasco Electrical Co-operative is seeking a $200,000 loan to expand its facilities in this area. The loan is being sought because of the expected increase in power demands as a result of construction of The Dalles Dam.
