H-Bomb Test

(Continued from page 1) known conventional atomic cloud, of damage to a building 18 miles away. In a written answer to questions which had been accumulating on his desk, Dean said: 1. Information would be limited to that contained in the formal announcement "because any amplification might give aid to potential enemies." No further announcements will be made. 2. The commission is "concerned" over the letters. VIOLATION 3. "Investigations are under way leading to possible disciplinary action or prosecution for violation of task force regulations or the law" in connection with the letters. Even before Dean's disclosure of the investigation, demands were beginning to appear in congressional quarters for an inquiry. Ben Bricker (R-Ohio), member of the joint atomic energy committee, said he wanted to know if security had been violated. Last night Bricker added that he had known all along that H-bomb research was included in the Eniwetok weapons test, but said he was in no position to know if an H-bomb was exploded. Bricker also contrasted the secrecy surrounding current tests with the open door policy of the 1946 Bikini atomic tests.

A heart attack suffered in the downtown area here late Saturday night took the life of George MCCready, 36, Cottage Grove. MacCready, a Shriner, was here for Hillah Temple's annual winter ceremonial held here all day Saturday. When he was stricken, friends rushed him to a hospital but he died a few minutes after being admitted. The body was returned to Cottage Grove by Ward's Funeral Home today.

The Atomic Energy Act carries the stiffest of penalties for violations of security—including death, life imprisonment, 30 years imprisonment or $20,000 fine or both. Letters which have appeared so far seem to be of the ordinary letter-to-home type, telling in an awed and gee-whiz manner of an amazing spectacle. DANGER The danger could be that the letters, if accurate, contain unintentional tidbits of scientific information of major value in guessing how good the 'United States' newest and mightiest weapon might be. The act says it "shall be the policy of the commission to control the dissemination of restricted data in such manner as to assure the common defense and security." Presumably it is under this broad provision that the "task force regulations" mentioned by Dean were set up. Disciplinary action, not necessarily involving prosecution.

could be taken under such regulations. Whatever instructions were issued to the several thousand men working at the Eniwetok proving ground about keeping silence on what they saw, the task force had no postal censorship in force to screen out references in letters sent home. There was the possibility that the letter writers, untrained as scientific observers, saw a standard nuclear fission explosion which, because they had seen no others, gave an exaggerated impression. But certain portions of letters seemed to counter such possibility.

If they were accurate, the dimensions of the explosion were vast greater than the most powerful standard atomic weapon. One writer told of a "flame" two miles wide at the core of it explosion. The fireball of a standard atomic bomb usually is more than a half mile in diameter.
