

Southern Governors Reject School Plan

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The Southern Governors' Conference turned down a proposal today to establish a Southern regional education foundation.

Proponents of the foundation said it was a conservation measure for Southern brains. Opponents called it "a super-duper outfit," "another sprawling bureaucracy," and a "potential booby-trap."

Dr. John H. Ivey Jr. of Atlanta, director of the Southern Regional Education Board, moved yesterday to shelve the foundation proposal after the governors of Texas, South Carolina, Virginia and Florida had challenged it.

Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas, chairman of the conference, said the primary objective of the board was the interchange of students among states, on a contract basis, but he did not want the board to go into the business of financing students and institutions.

"We're against federal encroachment on education," Shivers said, "and we are against any regional board telling us under what terms we can receive funds from a foundation."

He thought that creation of a foundation with supervision in interstate collaboration in higher learning would result in "another sprawling bureaucracy with the only excuse to make it easier for those who want to give, to give."

The Southern Foundation was to have been financed by gifts and grants from Ford, Kellogg, Carnegie and other foundations, as well as from industries which, said advocates of the foundation, would want to help pay for benefits which research in technological fields would bring.

Gov. James Byrne of South Carolina sided with Shivers by declaring he wanted to know who was going to administer those funds. "How, once it's given, is hard to recover," he said.

Gov. John Battle of Virginia lit the fuse that blasted the foundation when he asked matter-of-factly:

"How are the trustees (administrators of the foundation funds) going to be selected?"

Gov. Gordon Browning of Tennessee, chairman of the board, explained, "I'll be perfectly frank with you," the appointment of the other trustees "would depend on the amount of money they'd contribute."

It was subsequently moved that the question of establishing a foundation be referred to the committee on financing regional education, which is to report a year hence.

At the end of the annual joint meeting of the governors and the education board, Gov. Lawrence Wetherby of Kentucky was named chairman for the ensuing year.

Damage was confined to the ceiling and wall near the stove. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Branch, Art Kaley and Delbert were the fire fighters. Cause of the fire, as nearly as could be determined, was an overheated stove pipe.
