Radio Free Europe Pronounced Success

NEW YORK (AP)—Twenty-five million Americans have given $12 million dollars to fight communism in satellite countries in the last two years.

Paul Tigris, a Czech who commanded one division of the battle, is here with a ringing report of success, but he believes a much harder fight is needed before victory is won.

The battle launched by the National Committee for a Free Europe through broadcasts of Radio Free Europe in six satellite countries aims at ridding the Iron Curtain with shafts of truth. Its job is to tell satellite peoples what goes on in the rest of the world, to show them the West is concerned about what happens to them and to keep the hope for freedom flaming in their hearts.

"The violent reactions our broadcasts have brought from the Communists are evidence of their success," says Tigris, former chief of the Czechoslovak desk of Radio Free Europe in Munich, now working for the organization in the United States. "The Communists protested to the U. S. State Department. They launched vituperative attacks on RFE personnel. They resorted to jamming techniques. The jamming did create a problem, but the increasing number of RFE transmitters makes it more difficult to blank out our broadcasts."

"The programs go through. The letters we get and the refugees who slip through the Iron Curtain tell us daily of the program's success."

On the Fourth of July, 1950, the committee launched Radio Free Europe, broadcasting from one station near Frankfurt, Germany, with programs packaged in America. A few months later it started broadcasting its own programs from Munich, where Tigris joined its
