Scouts Slate Cascade Camp

EUGENE (AP) — Boy Scouts from six counties of the Oregon Trail Council will eat, sleep and train in the deep snow of the Cascades for the last four days of the year.

The boys will camp at the Willamette Ski Area near Odell Lake with Rollie Quam, assistant executive of the council, in charge.

He said boys will cook their own food and sleep in shelters which they build.

The Scouts will arrive by bus at the camp area Sunday.

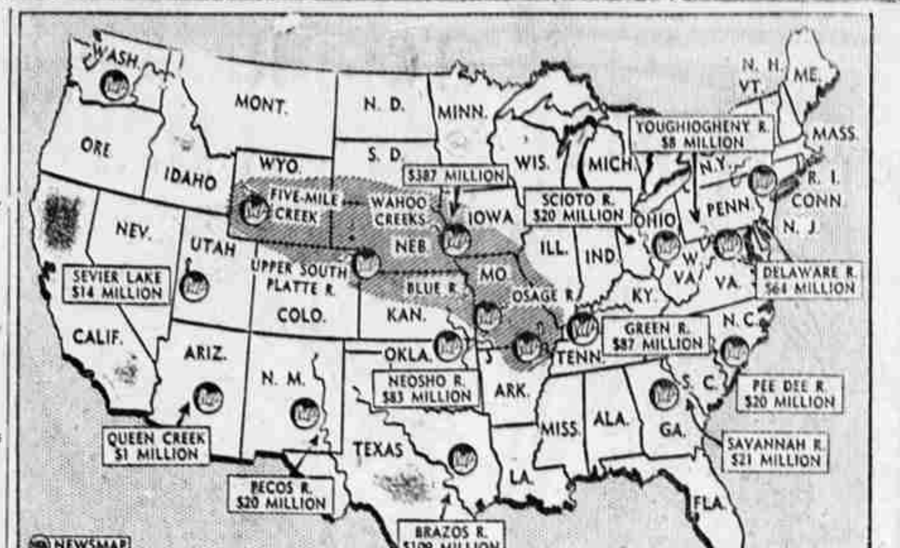
"THE NEW OPPORTUNITY"



WHEN THE NEW GOP Congress convenes in 1953 it will decide the fate of more than one billion dollars worth of flood control projects proposed by the Department of Agriculture. Above newsmap locates where the projects are to be initiated, and the amount proposed to be spent on each one. Shaded area locates the Missouri Valley Basin, scene of the most disastrous floods in U.S. history, where dams are expected to mitigate any such disaster in the future. No appropriation is listed for Washington's Columbia River basin floods project.

British News Distributors Opposed to American System

LONDON (AP) — In Britain most boys think it is beneath their dignity to earn a few coppers by delivering newspapers.

And it looks like things are going to stay that way, despite a plea by 17 British newsmen that the American system of "little merchant" newsboys might be an idea worth trying.

The suggestion came from a group representing British newspapers of all sizes outside London. After visiting American newspapers under the auspices of the Anglo - American Productivity Council, the group reported:

The "little merchant" system "can be a worthy and healthy effort (which) need not interfere with education and can instill in the youngsters the germ of business ability."

In Britain, the man who sells most of the newspapers is the news agent. He keeps a little shop that sells papers, tobacco and cigarettes, candy and a variety of odds and ends.

He gets his newspapers in bulk from wholesalers, splits them up and generally employs several boys on what the British call a newspaper "round" to push them under front doors. The boys get paid a flat rate—which varies according to the news agent—based on the number of customers on their round.

This system has worked so well for over 50 years that the 47,000 news agents scattered through Britain's towns and villages aren't losing much sleep over the suggestion that "little merchants" take over their work.

Albert Whinfrey, general secretary of the News Agents Federation, points out: The distribution of newspapers in Britain is complicated because well over 50 per cent of papers read are "national dailies" published in London and printed here or in large centers in the north.

The papers arrive at distribution centers by train, where they are collected by wholesalers. "Boys couldn't do this—railways wouldn't take kindly to a pack of kids running around," Whinfrey said.

"They might be able to collect papers direct from publishers in the case of local newspapers, but they wouldn't get very fat on the profits from that."

A quick denial that the suggestion was intended to cut out the news agent came from William Ridd, secretary of the Newspaper Society — the organization of newspapers outside of London.

Ridd, a member of the group that visited the U. S., explained the "little merchant" recommendation was made primarily to get parents and education authorities to change their views on the employment of boys in newspaper rounds.

He suggested the "little merchant" idea could be put into practice by news agents themselves, and wrote in the news agents magazine "National News Agents":

"Public opinion still regards this part-time occupation as something beneath dignity...detrimental to a boy's physical and mental development and well-being.

"American practice has shown such views to be ill-founded."

Despite Ridd's appeal, education authorities probably would step in with a veto if the "little merchant" idea showed signs of being taken seriously.

LANGELL VALLEY

The Langell Valley Home Extension Unit met Dec. 3, for a lesson on making aluminum trays. The group later met Dec. 9, at the home of Lois Monroe to finish the project.

Following the business meeting, the group enjoyed a Christmas party and gift exchange. Two accordion duets were played by Marian Potucek and Mildred Cunningham.

Present were Verda Urback, Lois Monroe, Ruby Heuston, Marian Potucek, Florence Baldock, Billie Colwell, Lela Scott, Lena Burden, Mildred Cunningham, Marian Randall and Debby.

Hostesses were Geneva Smith, Reni Schmidli, Betty Statler and Evelyn Seater.

The word GOSPEL means GOOD NEWS, and what news could be more wonderful than the news that Christ died for our sins, that He arose for our justification, that He ascended into Heaven to be our Intercessor, and that He is coming again to be our King.

MRS. LYDIA F. HOWARD was the guest of honor at the nurses' Christmas party here this year. She was made a life member of the Dist. 8 Nurses Association in recognition of her pioneering work in public health nursing. She began her career as a World War One nurse and continued nursing for more than 30 years following that war.

Yugos Cut Army Costs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Yugoslav government disclosed Friday it is cutting its planned military spending next year by 10 per cent.

The announcement added, however, that the cut will not affect Yugoslavia's ability and readiness to resist aggression.

Defense Minister Ivan Gosniak said the economy in the 600 million dollar 1953 military budget was made possible by a reduction of the training period for military reserve from three to two years, by demobilization of the home guard which was formed to operate against internal enemies, and by unexpected surplus from the 1952 budget.

Gosniak termed it a "peace" budget, obviously reflecting his government's confidence that Yugoslavia has less to fear next year from the possibility of a Cominform invasion.

The minister denounced both the Russian-led Cominform, which ousted Yugoslavia from the Communist partnership in 1948, and also assailed the activities of Italy and the Vatican.

Gosniak characterized the Vatican as the "main inciter" of anti-Yugoslav propaganda and said the Roman Catholic church does not see "that it is helping the forces of aggression."

He conceded Yugoslavia is "backward in aircraft production," but said his country next year will be able to produce a large percentage of military equipment needed for its armed forces and for its navy.

Military, Civilians Split Over Red Aims

VIENNA (AP) — Western Europe looked toward the new year and the East today with a general conviction that the Russians will hesitate to march in 1953 but will keep the cold war hot.

Many European statesmen, led by England's history - wise Winston Churchill, believe the danger of a shooting war has receded although the Kremlin still seeks Communist domination of all Europe.

Against this, military men fear a recent speed-up in Russian and satellite military power. The generals, led by U. S. Gen. Matthew Ridgway, supreme Allied commander in Europe, caution that the Soviets may be approaching the strength they need to overrun the continent at the same time that Europe relaxes in over-confidence.

That confidence is based upon the improved unity of the Western alliance. But crucial days lie ahead for the North Atlantic community. The Soviets seek to create new disagreements within the West. If unity is not preserved, fragile peace may crash into the abyss of atomic war.

After a period of uncertainty about future American policy, Europe now looks to president-elect Eisenhower to provide new drive, inspiration and leadership in its troubled efforts to forge a unified defense community. There is much hope that defense will take a new spurt forward after Jan. 20, even though Eisenhower may demand Europe trim the fat to beef up its muscles.

Statesmen and soldiers alike agree that, whatever else the year brings, it will see no let-up in Russia's needling, probing and bullying. But they will have a hard task to keep alive any sense of urgency among masses of Europeans who, more and more, are reassured by Stalin's "peace" talk.

Western intelligence, however, agrees the danger has by no means passed. Soviet military manpower and supplies are fast being increased behind the Elbe River. There are an estimated 19 Russian and satellite divisions in European Russia and her East European puppets. The aim of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was 96 divisions and 9,000 by 1954. But that goal became only a dream in mid-December when NATO cut its 1953 program because of confidence among politicians, combined with public pressure to cut expenses.

In this Russian-encircled easternmost European outpost of the Western world, some top flight intelligence men appraise the cold war outlook for 1953 as follows:

Russia, rather than the West, controls the situation. It can take the initiative and make the West jump. What Russia will do may depend upon developments within the Western alliance.

The West's unity primarily is based on French-German relations and the planned contribution of 12 German divisions to the European army. If this plan fails, the Atlantic nations will have to scramble to put together a new defensive alliance. Russia will have gained an important victory without war.

She will gain, too, if the West's peace contract with Germany is not ratified, if the Schuman coal-steel pool plan fails, if France and Germany can't solve their differences over the rich Saar Basin or if general unrest continues in North Africa.

But if the peace and European Defense Community treaties are approved, if Europe's economic recovery is speeded, if the situation in North Africa is nailed down, then, these intelligence men say, Russia has two choices for 1953:

First, the Kremlin can set back its timetable for Communist domination of Europe but keep the cold war brewing. (This is the expectation of British intelligence which reportedly believes the cold war will last until 1957.)

Alternatively, Joseph Stalin may consider that, in view of growing western strength it is time to take a calculated risk of war by a series of tough moves to strengthen Soviet positions in Europe. One such move may be a new blockade of West Berlin. Or the Soviets may drop the Iron Curtain in strategic Austria. West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer believes West Germany could be attacked by Czechoslovak or Polish troops.

Whether the Russians act for war or for doubtful peace, intelligence men say there is no doubt that:

1. Russia will continue to rearm its East European satellites and modernize their armies, which even now have an estimated 1½ million men under arms.

2. World communism will intensify its world-wide "peace" campaign. By this, the Soviets hope to relax more than ever Western efforts to rearm. Further cut-backs in rearmament might leave Europe open for a quick Soviet military adventure or for economic difficulties that could bring a growth of communism.

3. Communist agents will stimulate colonial unrest to drain the armies and economies of Britain, France and Holland.

4. Russia will attempt to end the strategic blockade of the Iron Curtain countries by encouraging more East-West trade.

5. The Kremlin and its puppets will try to win Yugoslavia back into the Eastern fold. Tito and his people are said to be unhappy because they feel they are second-class allies of the West.

Operation Due Doomed Mother

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doomed by the incurable lymphatic ailment Hodgkins' disease, a mother of three children was to undergo a caesarean section today for her fourth child—although doctors said the operation will shorten the tenuous thread of her own life.

"But if I can have my baby I'll die happy," said attractive Mrs. Jean Garrett, 27-year-old Hawthorne, Calif., housewife.

"Death is the least of my worries now."

Doctors said growth of her child-to-come has drained Mrs. Garrett's resistance to the cancerous blood condition and that her chances of surviving the surgery are none too good. They said her baby has a chance of being normal, however.

Although the shadow of death hovered over the home of Mrs. Garrett and her husband, Thomas, an aircraft worker, she smiled bravely last night as she bid her children good night. Before she and her husband started for Angelus Hospital she told a few friends, "This was the best Christmas ever."

She had determined long ago that this, perhaps her last, Christmas, would be a day of gaiety, with her husband and sons, Thomas Jr., 7; Robert, 3; and Raleigh, 18 months. Physicians told her when she became pregnant that she could prolong her life by giving up the child.

"Why, I feel that a baby has as much right to live as anyone else," she said in making her decision.

So yesterday Mrs. Garrett joined with her children in singing Christmas songs and in their glee at what Santa had left them around the gaily decorated Christmas tree.

There have been scores of offers from blood donors, some from as far east as Chicago, and letters of hope have flooded the Hawthorne home.

"We have thanked God for those who have written so encouragingly," said the husband. "They have given us the thing we need most—hope."

PTA Notes

TULELAKE

A Christmas program was given by the first and second grades at the December meeting of the Tulelake Elementary PTA, Dec. 13.

The Birth of Christ was pantomimed while the children sang a sequence of Christmas Carols. The numbers included "Oh Little Town of Bethlehem," "The First Noel," "It Came Upon A Midnight Clear," "We Three Kings of Orient Are," "Away in a Manger," "Hark the Herald Angles Sing," and "Silent Night." Mrs. Tucker and the seventh grade made the backdrop paintings and the choir collars for the chorus. Mrs. Mary Hite was in charge of the music.

The Rev. Dewey Arnold of the Church of Christ, spoke on the Story of Christmas in conjunction with this months theme "Spiritual Values Begin in the Family."

Mrs. Ross Ragland presided over a short business meeting. Room count was won by the second grade.

Refreshments were served by the third grade mothers.

Next meeting is scheduled for Jan. 16.

BIG EGG ON FIRST TRY

MALVERN, Ark. (AP) — A white leghorn pullet here may deserve some sort of award for egg production for a beginner. The pullet's owner, James Bell, deposited on the editor's desk at the Malvern Record an egg laid by the pullet in her first effort. It measured 8½ inches around at the ends and 6½ inches around the middle. It weighed 5 ounces. A standard egg for a full-grown hen, with considerably more experience at egg-laying, weighs two ounces.

MEDICAL PLAN SHELVED

CAIRO (AP)—Plans for the nationalization of the medical profession and the expansion of free medical treatment to Egypt's 20 million population has been abandoned for the present, Minister of Health Dr. Nureddin Tarraf says the proposed plan would have cost $143,500,000 and the country's economy could not stand such a strain. However, free medical treatment will be extended over a period of 15 years, the minister says.
