Coke Windows Remodeled

A remodeling job is under way at the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., building, Main and Springs streets.

To eliminate condensation of moisture on the large plate glass windows and to cut down on vibration from passing trains and trucks, present windows are being cut down and vents placed above them near the ceiling.

Everett Ball is manager of the local Coca Cola plant.

Monument Fund Grows

Klamath's Memorial Shaft may well get the revamping which local veterans' groups have been looking for—donations, pledges and promises have been rolling in right along since the Klamath County War Memorial Committee sent out its cards to as many local organizations as possible.

However, there have been a few donations coming in from private individuals as well. Committeemen said today individual contributions are beng gladly accepted, and should be made through the committee.

The shaft project, which would see the resheathing of the Memorial Shaft on the courthouse lawn, a concrete foundation and light-post and a steel fence around it, will probably cost about $2,000.

The committee would like answers in pledges or cash from as many as are planning to help by March 1 in order the renovation can get under way. Donations should be sent to Ted Case, County Service officer, Courthouse.

The shaft bears the names of 186 Klamath Basin war dead from World War I and II and 13 from the Korean War.

The committee has asked anyone knowing of any Basin casualties not already named on the shaft please contact the group.

Crater Lake Snow Falling

Snow was falling at Crater Lake National Park once more this morning where rain, not snow, has been the usual rather than the exception.

During the night some six inches piled up on the 80-add inches of snow already there, giving the total depth of 86 as a comparison against the 152 inch depth of one year ago to date.

For the past two weeks, though, there has been more precipitation in rainfall than snow at the park.

Skiing this weekend is expected to be fair, according to Assistant Chief Ranger Bernie Packard. The south and west entrance roads are open but chains are advised. The rim road is open, but chains are required.

Park Ski Tow To Operate

The Moore Park ski tow is to operate tomorrow and Sunday, Proprietor Ed Chubb announced today.

The park's ski slopes are reported in shape for skiing once again, and there is plenty of snow.

Meanwhile, City Recreation Director Bob Bonney announced today ice skating is "kaput" at the Moore Park rink, where temperatures have been far too high to put any sort of a surface on the ice.
