

Man of Crystal Balls Aims to Please Republicans

Al has two models on sale. One, about eight inches around, sells for $8.95. The other is about 3 1/2 inches around and is $7.50.

The small one is pure crystal. Al says. The other is blown glass, hollow like a Christmas tree ornament, and silvered on the inside.

"It's pretty easy to tell an amateur crystal gazer from a professional gazer when they're shopping for a crystal ball," Al says. "Amateurs go for the large, shiny one. The professionals want this smaller one of real crystal."

"The trouble is that there apparently aren't any expert makers of real crystal balls in the United States, at least none that I know about."

"When the Iron Curtain came down around Czechoslovakia, it dried up the supply of good crystal balls in free nations. Maybe they now need all they can manufacture behind the Iron Curtain to keep up with the demand at home. At any rate I've only got one left. Before I got the last shipment the price had gone up from $3.50 to $7.50. When this one is gone I don't know where I'll get more."

"This large, shiny, hollow ball is American-made, but the professionals don't like it."

Crystal gazers say everything depends upon the quality of the ball. The other day a woman returned one of the blown glass balls to Al and complained that it contained depressing ghosts and images. She insisted upon exchanging it for one that had been packaged tightly, never exposed to the light of day, and never had a price tag written upon or attached to it.

"A professional gazer had told her that if a crystal ball has been exposed to daylight and the images of many people things always turn out bad."

"Then she confided that she plays the numbers game and gazed in crystal balls for visions of numbers to put money on."

"The numbers she saw in this ball seemed to be slightly confused with ghost numbers in the background. She thought the ball must have had a price tag on it and that the numbers on the tag had been transmitted to the ball in a ghostly form.

"I readily exchanged it. After all, I want cheerful images and clear-cut, truthful digits to appear on the crystals we sell."

Jury Mulls Red Case

As they had done frequently since receiving the case, the jurors yesterday asked that portions of the testimony during the 8 1/2-month trial be read to them.

The jurors have been locked up at a midtown Manhattan hotel each of the last four nights.

In the original indictment returned June 20, 1951, eight other second-string Communist leaders were named in addition to the 13 current defendants. However, four of the eight never were apprehended; two others avoided trial because of illness, and two others were granted direct acquittals by Dimock earlier in the trial.

The 13 remaining defendants are Alexander Bittelman, 61; George Blake Charney, 46; Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, 60; Betty Gannett, 44; Victor Jeremy Jerome, 54; Arnold Samuel Johnson, 46; Claudia Jones, 36; Alexander Leo Trachtenberg, 65; Louis Weinstein, 48; William Wold Weinstein, 53; Pettis Perry, 54; Jacob Mindel, 69; and Albert Francis Lannon, 53.

Conviction carries a possible maximum penalty for each defendant of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

During the 1952 season, attendance at National League games was down 11.7 per cent from 1951. In the American League it dropped 8.6 per cent.
