WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) — A maximum six-point rise in Southern Railway on an increased dividend and split proposal Tuesday highlighted an otherwise moderately higher stock market.

The market as a whole lacked a lot of enthusiasm in its advancing phases, and it had difficulty in holding to its gains which were mostly fractional, as were the losses.

Trading ran to an estimated million and a half shares. That compares with 1,420,000 shares traded Monday.

Newell Camp In Dimes Drive

TULELAKE — Federal prisoners at the camp at Newell have contributed $31.80 to the March of Dimes. Since 10 of those living there have no funds at all, the amount was actually divided among 50 men.

The camp has no industry for inmate income but a few meritorious workers receive a small monthly stipend.

Prisoners are permitted to contribute to the blood bank, the Red Cross, March of Dimes and other charitable drives and always respond generously according to Lemuel Fox, prison superintendent.

The amount will be turned into the March of Dimes fund being collected in Tulelake.

Goal this year is $500.

Bill Seeks Deer Change

SALEM (AP) — A bill to allow the governor to set the dates of elk and deer hunting seasons will be introduced soon by Rep. Loran Stewart, Cottage Grove lumberman.

Seasons now are set by the State Game Commission. The governor has only the power to close forests to all entry when there are fire hazards.

When there are forest fire hazards when the hunting seasons are about to open, there sometimes is disagreement between the game commission and the governor.

Last year the governor closed Western Oregon forests, leaving Eastern Oregon open. This caused an unusually large number of hunters to go to Eastern Oregon.

'Y' Member Drive Gains

Klamath County's YMCA moved right along today in its Membership Enrollment Week, concurrent with National YMCA Week, as members of the Y's membership committee began telling the YMCA story in the Klamath area.

And Thursday night a panel of Klamath young people have selected a topic for a public audience participation panel slated for the YMCA building. The topic: "Are facilities for the youth of Klamath Falls adequate." The panel members of the Klamath youth group.

The membership committee is chairmaned by Earl Kent, who is a member of the Y's board of directors. Vice Pres. Rex Dye, Speaker's Bureau Director Dick Gallagher and Men's Division Chairman George Proctor are inviting Klamath folks to look over what the local Young Men's Christian Association offers, and then take out memberships if they like what they see.

The YMCA's purpose is to build a Christian society and develop fully a Christian personality in each individual it comes in contact with. The Y's building is just one of its tools in doing this.

As a self-supporting organization, the YMCA needs memberships to become more independent. A 500 adult-membership limit has been tentatively established for the present enrollment plan. There are several hundred young people already members, according to Y Secy Paul Campbell.

Polio Vaccine

during the past several months—in fact, the kind of progress that one is accustomed to see prior to the taking of an important step forward.

Dr. Weaver described these research advances at a special dinner meeting of foundation trustees.

It means that enough work on a safe, practical vaccine has been done in the laboratory, and the next step is human trials.

Dr. Weaver stressed that success in producing this vaccine came from work of many scientists, putting together pieces of a tremendous jigsaw puzzle.

He mentioned no names. But it is known that Dr. Jonas E. Salk, University of Pittsburgh virus expert, is working with this kind of vaccine.

Several other methods of making or using vaccines—some employing live but weakened virus—will still be studied, he said.

And the search will continue for drugs which may combat polio. Dr. Weaver said, "We are now in a favorable position to detect reasonable effective drugs, if they exist, or can be made."

The foundation, meanwhile, will help to stockpile and use a temporary polio-fighter. This is gamma globulin, a protein in blood that carries antibodies against polio.

Dramatic tests last summer proved that shots of gamma globulin can give temporary protection—about six weeks — against polio paralysis.

Most people already have had unrecognized cases of polio and built up their own antibodies against at least one type of virus. Our gamma globulin still carries these antibodies.

Gamma globulin from the pooled blood of many persons exposed to polio is being collected and stockpiled by the foundation, American Red Cross, National Research Council and some other agencies for allocation next summer to help combat polio epidemics.

Antibodies given through gamma globulin soon disappear. Those made from getting a vaccine would last much longer. Time will tell whether this vaccine is really the final answer to polio. If it works as hoped, polio will have lost its sting.

Wilson Post

Eisenhower may move slowly in giving them formal nominations, which the Senate Armed Services Committee has ruled must be forthcoming before they can be summoned to testify again. They appeared with Wilson at closed hearings Jan. 15 and 16.

The understanding of armed services committee members was that the names of Wilson's proposed assistants will be sent to the Senate one at a time, with that of Roger M. Kyes, chosen deputy secretary, to be submitted first.

Klamath Council M... To Extend City ...

The City Council last night resolved to extend Portland Street paving from the alley just above Pacific Terrace to Newcastle Street, a distance of 270 feet. A public hearing on the resolution was set for regular council meeting, Mar. 2, 7:30 p.m.

City Engineer Taxi Thomas said there were two tentative plans for surfacing it: asphalt, with cement curb and gutters at an approximate cost of $7,020; 2) cement street, curb and gutters at an approximate cost of $8,350.

Thomas said he had talked the matter over with 12 of 14 principal property owners involved and they had agreed to the project.

A group of residents from the vicinity of Nevada and Kiln Streets appeared before the council to object to the condition of property on the corner of Nevada and Kiln. Principal spokesmen for the group were Otis Stansbury and G. L. Ballantyne. They charged the property owned by Jack Saunders, did not meet city building and sanitary requirements.

City Building Inspector Vern Shortgren said Saunders had recently obtained a $4,000 building permit which would bring the property up to building code specifications.

Stansbury and Ballantyne answered, however, that Saunders had been on the property for some six years without any sewer hookup and had failed to follow through on other occasions when he had said he intended improving the property.

The council instructed Shortgren to investigate the matter further and report back to the council.

On recommendation of Councilman Don Kenyon, the council tentatively approved the opening here of a bartender's school, to be conducted by Tom La Penna. The school is to prepare bartenders for serving liquor by the drink, as approved in the November, election. State law requires that bartenders know how to properly prepare a long list of cocktails and highballs.

Kenyon said LaPenna would also acquaint his students with Oregon's alcoholic laws.

Otis Stansbury, who is foreman of the Klamath Lumber and Box Company mill, told the council that the fire alarm at the mill was not functioning.
