Sanitation has been one of the major factors in establishing the American way of life which has, in conjunction with the economy, built this nation to the head of the world's list of republics. Much credit goes to the plumbing fraternity for the development of this trend for sanitation.

During these winter months many plumbing and heating systems are affected by the cold weather. Nothing can be more distressing than to have plumbing systems become frozen or water lines broken by freezing and it's just the last word in distress to have a heating system become imperative. To meet these situations promptly and efficiently, G. C. Motley maintains a service including journeymen plumbers and steam fitters with a well equipped truck, to answer these emergency calls, and repair or put into operating condition these impaired systems. This service has been much appreciated and has resulted, in some cases, in the remodeling of inefficient plumbing by installation of new pipe and equipment or an entirely new and up-to-date heating system.

These include automatic radiant heating systems, modern utilities and that glory of the American art — the modern bathroom. Whether one lives on a ranch, in the suburbs or heart of a city like Klamath Falls, the entire family can enjoy modern plumbing facilities, automatic heating and the many conveniences that in those "good old days" were not enjoyed by those living in the largest metropolitan center. Many things have made these blessings possible, today, including inventive genius, plentiful capital and that insatiable desire for something better so peculiar to Americans.

Out of this advancement has come a class of men, recognized quite generally, as those who protect the health of the nation. He is the journeyman plumber. Often he has been made the subject of ridicule as the "Man who forgot his tools"—but today many lives have been saved and epidemics of disease have been forestalled by the efficiency of his work. Recently the Carnegie Institute of Technology added to its curriculum a professorship and course in plumbing, heating and ventilation. In the words of Thomas S. Baker, then president: "I hope this department will result in further improvement in the American standards of living."
