MAY FACE THE REAL THING — Chinese Nationalists soldiers land weapons and personnel carriers on the Formosa coast during maneuvers last August. Following hints of President Eisenhowers's planned withdrawl of U.S. Seventh Fleet units between Formosa and the Red China mainland, Fleet Admiral Wm. D. Leahy said it might be a "bright idea" to free Chinese nationalists for raids against the China coast.

Handless Persons Made Able To Play Piano After New System Finished

By ADELAIDE KERR

NEW YORK, N. Y. (AP) — When Elve Welbourne sat doodling on the piano one evening last October, she never thought she might be developing a system to teach handless people to play.

She believes it now. She hopes it will fling wide the doors of musical expression to many handicapped people.

Her doodling was playing with one finger of each hand. The melody note played by the right finger was sustained by the pedal. The chord played by the left finger was played as an arpeggio, the component notes struck singly.

Then she tried playing with the right elbow and the left thumb of a hand clenched tightly, as an arthritic's hand sometimes is. She put rubber-tipped pencils in clenched fists and played with them.

Her husband, P. A. Welbourne, who is in the real estate business, stopped beside the piano in amazement to watch Mrs. Welbourne's technique.

"Could you teach that?" he asked.

Mrs. Welbourne, who operated the Krasny School of Piano and Voice in Brooklyn many years, was sure she could. After practicing awhile she showed the system to 10 handicapped patients at Goldwater Memorial Hospital and one at the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation here. Six to seven weeks of study cannot make a finished performer, but Mrs. Welbourne is much heartened by results.

"One of the greatest," she said, "was to [illegible] made them [illegible] musically [illegible] dreamed they [illegible]

"My aim is [illegible] already have [illegible] lectures and [illegible] various organiza[illegible] teachers associa[illegible] give a great [illegible]

Three Drown In Sand Pond

ELMONT, N. Y. (AP)—Three small children—a brother and sister and their playmate—drowned yesterday while playing in a sand pit pond.

Police said the children apparently were playing on a wooden boat which capsized and tumbled them helpless into the 20-foot deep icy water.

The three were identified as Robert Hellenek, 11, and his sister, Pamela, 8, and Ronnie Ruggiero, 5, all of Elmont.

Ronnie's 13-year-old brother Vincent was playing with them and after plunging into the water in a futile attempt to save them, ran for help.

The pit, 100 feet wide and 350 feet long, was dug as a commercial sand and gravel venture more than 30 years ago when this was a rural area dotted with potato farms.

Youngsters Stop Electric Express

YONKERS, N. Y. (AP)—A New York Central electric train ground to an unscheduled halt yesterday near here. Reason: two 4-year-old boys sitting between the rails, playing contentedly.

The engineer stopped his train 10 feet from them. They looked up curiously and went on playing.

A conductor scooped them up onto the train and deposited them with police at the next station.

The boys, Robert Herbst and Robert Freet Jr., had wandered away from their homes, about 100 feet from the railroad tracks.

Supreme Judges Guests Of Ike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower had the nine justices of the U. S. Supreme Court to lunch yesterday at the White House.

Only comment afterwards came from Chief Justice Vinson, who called the get-acquainted session "very nice."

Hollywood Book Seller Character, But For Real

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Party of the week in Hollywood was a wake given by Stanley Rose, one of the town's best-known characters.

Hollywood is full of characters, most of them phony. Stanley is a character, but for real. If he could write the story of his life, it could be a best-seller. But he's too busy selling books for other people.

Stanley is a book agent. A sizeable number of the frustrated novel writers in Hollywood have enjoyed his counsel. Some of them even panned out. One was Ted Bonnet, who gave up press agenting for people like Cecil B. DeMille and Walter Wanger to write a hit called "The Mudlark."

Stanley, a tolerant fellow with a reddish mustache, used to be in another line in the book business. In the earlier days of the movies, he used to tour the studios with stacks of books, selling them from office to office. Then he graduated to his own book store on Hollywood Boulevard. Any day you might find people like Charlie Chaplin, Mack Sennett, Budd Schulberg or Gene Fowler browsing through the stacks.

The trouble was that Stanley had too many friends. So many of them borrowed the books and money that he went out of business. So he decided to sell authors instead of books. One of his first clients was a mercurial Armenian from Fresno named William Saroyan.

About the wake. Oh, it was something! Stanley summoned a few dozen of his closest friends to the apartment of Anthony DeMario, the first and only actor he has agented. Stanley explained how the event happened.

"I heard on TV that it was the anniversary of Buddy DeSylva's death. That made me feel bad. He was my best friend, and I didn't even attend the funeral or console his family. So I decided to have a party in his memory."

Guests ranged from producer Arthur Freed ("An American in Paris") to a reformed pickpocket. Also present were a scattering of sports editors, city editors, columnists, doctors, attorneys, restaurateurs, press agents, etc.

There was a serenading guitar player, and Kid Ory's Dixieland band was slated to appear at 3 a.m. "I think the affair is a success," observed Stanley as he stood among the noisy throng in his stocking feet.

The wake may still be going on.

Business Optimistic At Prospect

By RICHARD FISKE

NEW YORK (AP) — The news from Washington gave business and industry a lift and new confidence this week.

President Eisenhower's state of the union message had a good reception from private enterprise.

Budget balancing was underway. Spending was restricted. The order went out to limit government keep operations at minimum levels.

All wage and salary regulations were wiped out. A long list of the price controls businessmen have been battling were removed.

A cross-section of businessmen and industrialists didn't think the dropping of price controls would greatly affect prices.

They saw it as a step toward normalcy, where supply and demand determine price.

They pointed out most of the price tags were below ceilings anyway. They said competition for the consumer's dollar was keen and would tend to hold the price line.

There was some feeling, however, that the discontinuance of wage regulations could lead to increased labor costs. And if labor costs go up, some said, there could be a price revision.

Production in some industrial lines took a little breather. But the levels generally remained high.

On the New York Stock Exchange, prices on the average took their biggest weekly tumble since October 1951.

Traders attributed the decline to such reasons as February's traditionally bearish tendencies, the wiping out of controls and the administration's anti - inflationary measures.

Realtors Study Local Relief Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Realtors Washington Committee said today it was trying to develop a financial relief plan for local governments whose communities contain tax-exempt federal property.

Henry G. Wallemade, committee chairman, said the federal exemption from local taxes amounted to a subsidy by the local community, which had to provide police and fire protection, sewerage facilities and other services without compensation.

Wallemade said his committee, the legislative arm of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, would make a thorough study of the problem.

PLANE CRASHES

LONDON (AP)—A U. S. Air Force B36 bomber crashed today on a farm near Lacock, 150 miles southwest of London, after the crew had bailed out. All were reported safe.

Fernando Lamas Promises To Be Second Valentino

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Women are same everywhere in the world, I say God bless them."

These were the word of Fernando Lamas, the most promising Latin lover to hit the screen since the days of Rudolph Valentino and Ramon Novarro. He made a hit co-starring with Lana Turner in "The Merry Widow" and continued with a real-life romance with her that was torrid if short-lived.

Fernando's steady date these days is luscious, flame-haired Arlene Dahl, with whom he is starring in "Sangaree." (By curious Hollywood logic, Lana is now being squired by Lex Barker, recently divorced from Miss Dahl.) An amiable and talkative fellow, the Argentinian reflected at length about women here and abroad.

He observed that women are the same everywhere in the world,n differing only in degrees.

"American women are slightly different from Latins because they have more freedom," he remarked. "I take my hat off to them; the women here have earned their position of equality with men. They can influence men by direct means, whereas the Latin women cannot. The Latin women have to remain in the home, and the man is the master. Whatever influence they have must come by indirect means.

"The women in the U. S. have the advantages of equality with men, but they also have disadvantages. In gaining their position, they have had to get in and work elbow to elbow with men. Thus they lose a certain quality of softness.

"Ah, softness! That is the thing I look for in a woman. Arlene possesses it to a remarkable degree. But that is probably because she is a second-generation American. Her father undoubtedly brought her up with the old-world philosophy toward women."

I asked him how American and Latin women differed as to physical beauty.

"I read this once in a book," he replied. "And I believe it is true: 'From the waist down, the American woman is the best; from the waist up, the Latin woman is the best.'

"That is how I feel. American women undoubtedly have the most beautiful legs in the world. The women are also more striking looking, because they are bigger. But for classic beauty, the Latin women have the most beautiful faces."

Oh yes. We also talked about less ethereal matters, such as his career. Now on loanout from MGM, he is seeking a permanent release from the studio. So far MGM, which has his services tied up for four more years, doesn't see it his way.

"I am very friendly with the studio," he assured me. "I am grateful to them for such a wonderful break as 'The Merry Widow.' But I would like to plan my own career. In Argentina, I produced six pictures and directed two. I would like to buy stories here and make them myself.

"Hollywood is a momentary place, and I feel this is my moment. I like it here, and I'd like to stay. But perhaps two years from now, some fellow in the balcony of a theater in Kansas City will get up and say, 'Aw, I'm getting tire of seeing that guy on the screen.' Six other people might join him and that would be the beginning of the end."

Suspect Found In Creamery

A 20-year-old Weitchpec, Calif., man was jailed last night here after he was caught in the Medo-Land Creamery.

He gave his name as Willard Lewis, and said he escaped nine days ago from a state hospital at Cameron, Calif., where he was incarcerated for armed robbery.

Lewis was booked at the City Jail for burglary.

He was surprised and caught in the checking room of the creamery by V. E. Adams, 1839 Earle, Medo-Land foreman, and a visitor, Glenn Lay of Bend, after he had broken open a vending machine.

Lewis was eating a sack of peanuts when caught, and police said he had four more sacks of peanuts and five candy bars laid out to take with him. He said he had been riding freights since escaping from the hospital, and had eaten very little.

The youth apparently got into the building by way of the loading dock.

Jewelry Returned To Socialite

NEW YORK (AP)—Jewelry worth $18,000 has been returned to socialite Brenda Frazier Kelly whose Park Avenue apartment was robbed last September.

Police yesterday said they are looking for a woman who told a jeweler the jems were family heirlooms. The jeweler purchased the valuables, then learned they were stolen and turned them over to police.

Germans Plan Big Airlift

BONN, Germany (AP)—The Bonn government says it soon will begin a daily airlift of 1,000 Communist-zone refugees from crowded West Berlin to West Germany.

An official announcement last night said the refugees will be carried at government expense to ease the strain on Berlin, jammed by a steady stream of persons fleeing the Soviet-controlled East zone.

Since only the Western occupation powers are allowed to fly across the Soviet zone between West Germany and Berlin, the German government presumably will appeal to the British, American and French airlines for the extra emergency flights.

The airlines of the three countries flew 10,000 refugees out of West Berlin last month.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's government also announced plans yesterday for a 20-million dollar housing program for refugees, requisition of emergency living space and establishment of a special resettlement commission.
