

"THE LAND OF THE LEI" . . . was their destination for an indefinite stay . . . The K. Farther Ellingsons photographed on the Lurline as the ship approached the harbor of Honolulu. Memories of a previous mid-winter vacation in the islands drew them back to Hawaii and its gracious mode of living. On this trip, they will renew acquaintances and friendships made when they visited the "enchanted isles" before.

Weyerhaeuser Camp 6

By ELEANOR THOMSON

The residents of camp have been treated to a spectacle we were able to watch from our windows. That of the falling of trees and skidding of logs around camp, I can remember wondering when I first moved here, eight years ago what the big white C's painted on some trees meant. I actually thought it meant C-grade and wondered why there were no A-grade! The last week of January, when the fallers were through for the winter at Camp nine, they moved in here and went to work. The grand of the saws the swoosh and thus of falling trees became common sounds. The first week in February the "cats" were busy skidding the logs to the jammer which is working in camp leaving a jungle of branches and limbs in its wake. Brush-piling operations will follow, and in time this brush will be burned. We are bracing ourselves for the March winds which will blow a little more vigorously around our ears since we have less protection from trees.

We are all happy over the fact that the camp store will soon be opened under the management of Mrs. R. M. McVeigh. The Don Hucks who ran it formerly have decided not to come back.
