'BEAUTY AND THE BRUTE' is an appropriate title for this picture. At the J. W. Kerns Company, fetching Joan Caster, office employe, perches in a giant Firestone tire which weighs 1,135 pounds and stands 6 feet, 10 inches. The tire is for the big earth mover owned and operated by Barney Hooper, Midland.

More Poultry, Stock in '52

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department reported Friday that livestock and poultry on farms and ranches increased one per cent last year. This was the fourth successive annual increase.

The increase was substantial in cattle—a fact that has played a role in recent decreases in prices.

Hog numbers reported a sharp decrease after having increased each year since 1948. Low prices for this type of meat animal last year have been reflected in reduced production.

The department said that even with a slightly larger aggregate number of livestock and poultry, the total farm value declined 24 per cent during the year. The value was put at $14,900,000,000 compared with a record of $19,000,000,000 on Jan. 1 a year ago.

On Jan. 1, the values of all species were lower than a year ago. The most marked of all were the declines of 44 per cent from a year ago in the average value per head for stock sheep and 28 per cent for cattle and calves.

The number of cattle and calves on farms on Jan. 1 was estimated at 93,700,000 head, an increase of six million head or seven per cent during 1952. The biggest increases took place in beef cattle. Hog numbers on farms on Jan. 1 were reported at 54,800,000 head compared with 63,582,000 a year earlier and 62,827,000 for the 10-year average.

Maureen O'Sullivan Gives Good Advice To Mothers

By ROB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Maureen O'Sullivan gazed sympathetically at a child actress who was setting fretful while waiting to play a movie scene.

"Your daughter will be too tired to do the scene," Miss O'Sullivan remarked to the tot's mother. "Why don't you have her lie down for a nap?"

"Oh, she wouldn't lie down," the mother replied blandly.

Miss O'Sullivan commented later: "That amazed me. If the child were one of my children, she'd take a nap, or else."

And that's why rearing seven children is easier than bringing up one, two or three. This may come as a shock to some harassed parents (me, for example) but she says it's true. Being the most prolific movie mother, she ought to know.

"I really think it is easier to manage my seven," she argued. "The reason is that you can't afford to humor each one of them. If you had to stop and reason to get them to do something, your life would be chaotic. They have to learn to do things when they're told."

"With seven children, you have to organize your household and keep it well disciplined. The children eat at a certain hour and we eat at a certain hour. There is a certain time for television — if school home work has been completed. The schedule must be maintained."

The actress and her husband, director John Farrow, have kids of all sizes, ranging from 13 to 15. The couple is certainly a fine example in the trend toward big reported by population experts. Miss O'Sullivan offered her own view on the trend.

"The 1930s were a pretty disillusioning period," she remarked. "People didn't have much hope about the future. But I think people are happier and more confident now."

Miss O'Sullivan is not only the most prolific actress in childbearing, but also in picture-making these days. She has done five movies in the past few months, plus TV and radio appearances. At present she is playing John Ford's "Mission Over Korea," a role she also did in a TV film.

"I seem to have a one-track mind," she commented. "When I get into something, I devote all my efforts to it. When I was having babies, I did nothing else. When I do pictures, I go all out."

She reported that her children were delighted with the resumption of her film career.

"They like to have me come home and tell them what Bob Hope said and so forth," she remarked. "It makes their mother seem a little more exciting. I think."

Sub Tests Seal Men In Solitude

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy Thursday announced the names of 23 human "guinea pigs" sealed aboard an old World War II submarine in a two-month test.

The Navy said members of the volunteer crew aboard the USS Haddock at New London, Conn., are undergoing identical conditions expected for the crew of "the world's first true submersible—the atomic submarine."

The Navy said in a statement that the crewmen have games, hobbies, phonograph records and movies—but there is no mail from home, no telephone connections for calls to friends or family, no radio or television entertainment.

"They will not see daylight, barring emergencies, during the two months, the operation is scheduled to run," said the Navy.

"That's the way it will be when the Nautilus and the Sea Wolf, the two nuclear-powered submarines now being built and the world's first such craft, put out to sea. Their engines will enable them to stay submerged almost indefinitely."

Now, says the Navy, it wants to know "how the human factor will limit operation" of nuclear submarines.

Anti-Morse Bill Pushed

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A bill was introduced in the State Legislature yesterday aimed at preventing Oregon's controversial Sen. Morse from seeking office as an independent.

Morse, who now identifies himself as an independent, bolted the Republican party last year to support the Democratic presidential ticket. He will be up for re-election in 1956.

The bill, which went before the legislature bearing the names of 25 of the 60 representatives and 25 of the 30 senators, says that a person elected to office by one party cannot seek re-election as a candidate for another party.

Republican leaders of the state are confident they could beat Morse if he ran as a Republican, but they think they might have trouble if he runs—as he says he will—as an independent.

Morse was quoted by the newspaper Oregon Journal as saying in a telephone interview that "the people will resist such cheap politics."

There is some question about the bill's constitutionality and sentiment is growing in the Legislature that such a bill might do the Republican cause harm by "making a martyr out of Morse."

American Soldier Still Best Catch For German Maids; 500 Wed Per Month

BAD NEUBRUNNEN, Germany (AP) — A British passport is not the good marriage bait it used to be in West Germany, but American soldiers are still regarded as the most eligible bachelors in this bachelors' paradise.

American GIs are taking German brides at the rate of 500 a month. There were only 36 marriages with Brits in the last six months of 1951.

Since 1947 British soldiers have married 6,526 German girls and Americans about 13,000.

The differences are partly due to the larger number of American troops — some 1 1/2 million have been stationed in Germany for varying periods since the war. Furthermore, Americans can marry Germans only six weeks before going home and there was a big rotation of American manpower in 1952.

British officers do not believe the decline reflects increasing unpopularity of Britons in Germany. On the contrary, staff officers here say, the British soldier has never, in general, been better liked than he is today.

Several factors are held responsible for the shrinking Anglo-German marriage rate:

West Germany's restored prosperity makes girls less willing to leave their own country to face the unknown in a foreign land—especially still-rationed Britain.

As the stigma of defeat fades and national pride grows again, German girls prefer, if possible, a German husband. The disproportion between the sexes in the West German population is declining.

On the other hand, America is the German teen-age girl's dreamland and the free-spending Yanks are still regarded as a good catch in the marriage market.

High Living Rats Turn Up With Stunted Growth Rate

DENVER (AP) — High living can be dangerous, especially for rats.

That's a finding announced yesterday by Dr. Essie White Cohn, University of Denver chemist and physiologist.

She reported on four years of experiments involving several hundred white rats. She found that those which spent 12 weeks atop 14,150-foot Mt. Evans, west of Denver, suffered stunted growth. Other rats kept at mile-high Denver, or at 10,700-foot Echo Lake, were not thus affected.

The rat experiments, she explained, were undertaken originally in connection with inter-university cosmic ray studies on Mt. Evans. There was question over housing for families of scientists from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Denver universities.

The troubles of rats in the rarefied, lower-pressure atmosphere of Mt. Evans led, she said, to beliefs that prolonged stays at high altitudes were "not advisable for youngsters." Housing for the scientists' families was therefore arranged below two-mile high Echo Lake.

"Maybe we were too cautious," Dr. Cohn said. "I doubt if a child's growth would be stunted."

She reported that the main danger to rats at the high altitude was an increase in red blood cells, a condition known as polycythemia.

At Denver, rats have about six million red cells per cubic millimeter. That's about the size of a pinhead. After a summer on Mt. Evans, the count went to 15 million.

Dr. Cohn said that the cause is not so much a lack of oxygen as it is the pressure of the atmosphere. The low pressure does not force oxygen to combine with blood in the lungs as it should.

"As a result," Dr. Cohn explained, "bone marrow produces more and more red blood cells to compensate for the lack of oxygen and we get the polycythemia."

As for humans, the red blood cell count is normally five to six million per cubic millimeter at Denver's altitude, but soars to 10 or 12 million on the Mt. Evans summit. The increase in both rats and men begins after two weeks of high-altitude living and reaches maximum in about 12 weeks.

But, Dr. Cohn reported that while human blood count drops back to normal on return to Denver, the acquired polycythemia of rats is permanent.

Gun Running Charges Eyed

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — U.S. District Attorney Frank Potter said Friday the U. S. State Department probably would prepare extradition proceedings, if necessary, against Mexican nationals named in a Mexican indictment charging conspiracy to smuggle large quantities of small arms to Mexico.

Meanwhile, Dallas gun dealers Thurman Randle and Thomas D. Park were ordered to appear Monday for a bond hearing on the charges.

Federal indictments were returned Thursday against the two Dallas men and 10 others. They denied the accusations.

In all, the grand jury's charge listed about $50,000 worth of allegedly smuggled arms and ammunition. In Washington, D. C., John C. Elliot, chief of the State Department's munitions division, said the case actually involves $250,000 worth.

BR-R-R-R
 PRASER, Colo. (AP) — This tiny cattle and lumber town on the western edge of the continental divide reported the coldest temperature in the nation early Friday—21 degrees below zero.

That close call might have been an accident, Hans Norland, insurance, 627 Pine St.

CG Probes Sea Death

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The helmsman of the ill-fated freighter Fairhope says he saw many of his fellow seamen intoxicated the night his stevedore disappeared and presumably was slain.

The helmsman, Donald Eugene Poole, testified before a Coast Guard marine board, which also asked crew members about use of narcotics aboard ship.

The vessel ran aground on an island off Baja, California, Jan. 30, the day after steward Carl Thurmond, 56, of Sibley, La., apparently was beaten, stabbed and stuffed through a porthole.

Poole told Capt. Samuel F. Gray, in charge of the hearing, that he had not heard of any use of narcotics aboard the craft. He testified:

"I remember seeing a jug of wine in the passageway where four or five guys were having a crap game. The jug was about half empty."

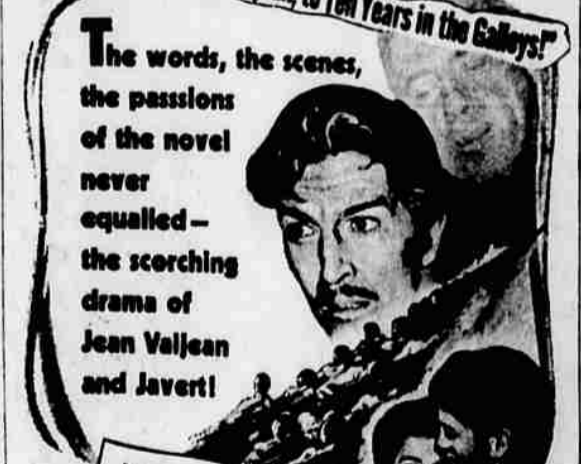

Poole related also that Thurmond apparently had exchanged punches with the chief cook and that Thurmond's eye was puffed and his face bloody.

The Fairhope's second mate, Arthur Weber, testified that so far as he knew the crewmen did not use narcotics.

He expressed belief that the Fairhope's backtracking for about 45 miles in an attempt to find Thurmond's body led to the ship's hitting rocks of San Benito Island, 340 miles south of Los Angeles.
