

Copper, Aluminum Market Closer To Being Fed; Car Makers Happy

OTON (AP) — The market for copper and aluminum was close to being free today, after a long period of being under government control.

Steel for the military and atomic energy needs, still to have preferred status, has been estimated at about 12 to 13 per cent of total output.

In Detroit, L. L. Colbert, president of Chrysler Corp., called the decontrol move "a perfectly feasible step... without injury to the defense program."

Colbert said it was doubtful that any appreciable extra metal would be available immediately, but that in the future "we will be able to set out production schedules on a basis of availability of materials."

Meanwhile, a rise in gasoline prices seemed to be the most likely result of earlier orders taking price ceilings off most petroleum products, among thousands of items. Wage and salaries controls also are gone.

In San Francisco Friday a group of independent retail dealers boosted the price one cent a gallon and major oil companies indicated they would follow suit.

In Fargo, N. D., Paul V. Koyner, marketing official of Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, predicted a nationwide one-cent rise in gasoline prices and a 35 to 50-cent per barrel boost in crude oil prices.

In New York, Shell Oil Company said no general increase in the price of retail gasoline was anticipated unless crude went up markedly. But a spokesman said minor rises might occur on the West Coast, in Ohio and elsewhere.

In Pennsylvania, the Joseph Seep purchasing agency hiked the price offered for crude oil 15 cents a barrel.

Production ceilings, like the automobiles, are out. The limitation now will be government still will see that military and atomic production get first call.

Continued to do that, under government terms a simplification, even after June 30, the CMP tickets allowed will give the holders since producers of the cut fill orders covered by it, before accepting orders.

Change in the economy will be steel mills and other plants begin to turn out what is earmarked for holders.

Carnival Of Brazil Has Color, Romance Of Congo

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The drums beat out a sullen hypnotic rhythm.

A samba line shuffles endlessly down a confetti-strewn street. In dance halls, grotesquely clad couples swirl into the shrill insistence of trumpets.

On silvery beaches, small clusters of Negroes gather to make weird chants and music in honor of ill-remembered gods of the Congo.

This, today, is Rio and Brazil, in its days of midsummer madness and gaiety, the Carnival.

The celebration will continue through Tuesday. Then Brazilians will begin talking of the next Carnival.

The holiday, traditionally, is the last few days before Lent. For Brazilians, it expresses carefree spirits, love for music and a good time. Their Carnival has become one of the world's most famous holidays.

This year, perhaps some of the surface gaiety is a little dimmer than usual. Due to a drought in the upland regions, Rio de Janeiro is short of electricity. The municipality decided to cut the number of lights that in the past have gleamed along the city's spacious avenues. Still, Avenida Rio Branco is alive with decorations.

The chief of police banned too scanty costumes, such as "Bikini" bathing suits; the use of ether-squirting spray guns; songs criticizing the powers that be; and the night sale of "perai," a Brazilian brandy.

In private clubs, the costumes, due both to the Rio heat and the equally torrid dancing, are as scanty as the law permits. The police occasionally intervene in these parties, to carry off young bucks who have snifled too much ether as a stimulant for further dancing.

Carnival fatalities usually average nine a day in Rio, but last year the chief of police won praise because there were only 20 for the entire four days.
