Church Hosts CFG Group

The Congregational Church will be host to a group of Camp Fire Girls tomorrow at the 11 a.m. service. This is in connection with observance of the Camp Fire Girls 43rd birthday.

During the service two of the young people of the church who attended a high school youth conference in Eugene last weekend, Royann Plass and Zella Scoules, will report on the conference. Another young person will be the organist to the day, Judy Ferrill, a student of the organ under Mrs. Violet Moore, director of music at the church.

The Rev. Donald Cassiday will speak on the theme "Increasing in Wisdom and Stature".

In the evening, the High School Pilgrim Fellowship of the church, will meet at 7 p.m. for a regular meeting which includes business, worship, discussion and recreation. The four girls who went to the Eugene conference, Barbara Bryan, Royann Plass, Zella Scoules and Barbara Silvers, will talk about the conference. Royann Plass, president of the group, says that any high school student is welcome to come to these meetings.

Marines Play Deadly Game With "Hole In The Head" War On Korea West Front

WESTERN FRONT, Korea (U.S. Marines entrenched on a little ridge jutting into no man's land on this Korean battlefield call it a "hole in the head" war.

They try to keep their own heads intact while picking off Chinese Communists entrenched at a Red outpost only 50 yards away and in the main Red line just behind it.

The heavy bark of US rifles is counterpointed by the higher pitched pings of Red snags going into the slopes above the dug-in Marines.

This is sniper warfare. A young lieutenant half walks and half runs down the zig-zag trench. His knees are bent and his back curved, with his head tucked low between his shoulders.

He crouches still lower, and speeds up when he comes to the sharp angles where the Chinese look-and-shoot-directly into the Allied trench.

"The Gooks have every one of those spots zeroed in with their rifles and machine guns," explains Lt. Edgar R. Franz of San Antonio, Tex.

"Don't let any one tell you that every Chink is a lousy shot," said Pfc. James P. Hanson of Kansas City, Mo. "Maybe they all aren't hot shots, but they've got enough good ones."

A Communist rifle bullet snaps overhead and plows into the hillside.

A few yards down the trench Cpl. Jim K. Hislop of Clio, Mich. and Pfc. Bernard Januska of Cleveland, O., scan the Red ridge-line.

"The unprintable so-and-so must be firing out of a slit in a bunker," he mutters. "He's not letting his muzzle flash give him away."

Another Red bullet pops into the back slope. Hanson, Hislop and Januska squeeze off single shots in almost perfect unison. This is suppression fire, designed to make the enemy keep his head down.

Franz sweeps the Red ridge with his binoculars watching for a bit of motion that may reveal the Red sniper's position.

Suddenly he tenses and hands his glasses to Marine Capt. Ben Price of Atlanta, Ga., who nods his head in confirmation.

On the ridge-line, nearly 500 yards away, Franz has spotted a camouflaged bunker slit about 2 feet long and 4 to 5 inches high. Price is itching to throw some slugs at the tiny target but he's not attached to the unit, Franz grins.

"Want to try your hand at it, captain," he asks. Price already is reaching for a rifle.

His first shot is a bit wide. His second ticks up a puff of dirt just below the aperture. He gets off three more shots. There are no puffs around the bunker slit.

"You know, captain," Franz says, "I figure you put those last three right through that aperture. We'd better get a bit of roofing over our heads."

Inside the Marine bunker the seconds tick away. Then there's a whoosh overhead, a muffled explosion behind the trench, another and still another. They are Red mortar shells.

Franz and Price grin at one another.

"It must have been a Commie F. O. (forward observation post) for mortar fire direction," says Franz.

He's still chuckling as he hurried

Morse Takes Up Battle With Wilson

WASHINGTON (U.S. — Sen. Morse (Ind.-Ore.) has run into a controversy with former General Electric Co. president Charles E. Wilson over what Morse called a proposal to sell the federal power projects to private utilities.

Morse told the Senate Friday backers of such a plan had induced Wilson — the one-time defense mobilization director, now the present secretary of defense — to give "a certain atmosphere of respectability" to the idea.

Wilson, at his home in Hearsdale, N.Y., retorted that Morse "is just off his beam when he says I was 'induced' into making the proposal."

Wilson said what he proposed in the speech Morse cited was that new companies be formed to take over "a given utility or any government owned property created in an emergency which no longer exists."

He said his proposal was to "sell it back to the citizens," not existing companies, and that he had discussed the idea with former President Truman when he was in government service.

Morse quoted Wilson as saying that public power and water projects "and similar enterprises" might be sold to holders of government bonds. The senator said the largest bondholders were "banks, insurance companies, large corporations and the wealthy — the very same people who own the private utilities."

The plan "would strip the nation of enormous assets," Morse continued, and provide "cheap dams for private utilities and expensive power for the people."

The words "similar enterprises," he added, could cover public housing, atomic energy properties and even the Postoffice Department facilities. He said there had been suggestions the Postoffice be turned over to private operation.

Wilson said he never made any such suggestion and that Morse had done "a demagogic thing" in bringing it up.

But he added that if it were run by private enterprise the postoffice "wouldn't be having those awful deficits each year."

Hospital Bed Developed

LOS ANGELES (U.S. —Mechanized hospital beds may help relieve the shortage of trained nurses in hospitals.

So believes Joseph D. Carrabino of UCLA's School of Business Administration and College of Engineering. In a recent study on the subject, Carrabino found that a mechanical bed developed by Dr. Starvel Beem, a surgeon, cut down nurse time requirements by 46 per cent.

Dr. Beem's mechanical bed, which will go into production this spring, contains these conveniences:

A self-contained tray, a built-in toilet, a lavatory with hot and cold running water, a self-contained stretcher, variable elevation, mechanical head, knee and foot lifts, and an oscillator which causes the bed to move back and forth.

It also has a central hydraulic push-button control panels and other features to help satisfy most of the patient's needs without calling a nurse.

Jelke Given Jail Term

NEW YORK (U.S. — Mink F. (Mickey) Jelke, cafe society vice figure and oled heir, was taken in a police van Saturday to Rikers Island to begin serving an eight month workhouse sentence for possessing two guns.

One gun was found in his automobile and one in his apartment when the 23-year-old playboy was arrested in the vice case last August.

He had pleaded guilty to the gun charges and was sentenced Friday. A jury has convicted him for procuring women for wealthy friends and he is due to be sentenced March 27 for this offense.

Community Chest Mull Possibilities United Fund Drive

BY WALLACE MYERS

A big Klamath gun which fired two years ago is being loaded for another shot. And this time there appears to be a better chance of the shot eventually hitting the target.

At a meeting this coming Wednesday evening of the Klamath Community Chest Board of Directors, the idea of including the chest in a United Fund Drive is to be explored.

This idea of a United Fund Drive, often referred to as the Detroit Plan, is not new in Klamath. Back in July, 1951, a former Klamath Falls resident, Mrs. Ann Laurent, interested several civic and business leaders in the plan. Some two or three meetings were held, the acting chairman, the then mayor, Bob Thompson, appointed an interim committee to explore the matter further. But the drive fizzled out before any real progress was made.

All the persons who attended the 1951 sessions were not agreeable to the Detroit Plan idea. Most of the objections seemed to be based on the mistaken idea that the plan was in some manner an effort to threaten the chest's future. Actually, in the great number of cities and counties that have adopted a United Fund Drive, the plan has not been heard of a single instance where the United Drive is employed that the chest has not received its full quota of funds. (The Klamath Community Chest, operating under its present campaign methods, has not reached its goal but one time in many years and that was in the early '40s.)

Now that the Community Chest directors themselves want to explore the United Drive, it appears to have a much better chance. The meeting will be held in the Little Theatre at Klamath Union High School, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m. All persons who contributed to the chest this year are eligible to attend.

O. R. Durham, executive director of the Oregon State Community Chest, is to be here from Salem for the meeting. That further brightens the United Fund's chances since Durham is a known champion of the plan. Appearing as a panel member on a Herald and News-KFLW radio discussion forum in October of 1952, Durham said the United Drive was proving altogether successful and popular in many cities and counties. He singled out Portland and St. Louis where he had studied results at first hand.

The United Fund or Detroit Plan is simply this: all worthwhile health, welfare and community service agencies are joined in one annual campaign rather than having several fund raising drives spread throughout the year. About the only things not included in the drive, and for obvious reasons, are such events as Salvation Army Christmas kettles, Easter and TB seals.

There have been some instances of a modified drive which includes only the Community Chest and Red Cross. The Klamath chest directors will probably study this plan too.

Oddly enough, the Detroit Plan got its biggest boost here from a man who at the time knew nothing about the Detroit Plan. Early in 1951, Ernie T. Taylor, treasurer and office manager of the Palmerton Lumber Company, wondered if Palmerton employees wouldn't rather contribute a small amount monthly to a general welfare and service fund that be buttonholed and solicited by various agencies throughout the year. No solicitations would be allowed in the plant and offices. The fund would be administered by an employee-management committee, management would include since management would contribute a proportionate share to the fund. When an agency came calling for a contribution, the committee would decide first whether it was a worthwhile cause and then how much to contribute from the accumulated fund.

The employees liked the idea and the plan, actually a little Detroit Plan, was put into effect. It proved so successful and popular with the Palmerton employees that now Palmerton employees that more than 40 of the county's large firms have adopted similar plans.

This year, Taylor is president of the Klamath Chest and his experience with the payroll deduction practice at Palmerton makes him a big booster for an all-out Detroit Plan. Taylor and Charley Mack headed the Community Chest Payroll Deduction Committee in the past campaign.
