Baruch Asks Standby US Curb Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bernard M. Baruch said Monday that if war comes and finds the government unprepared to clamp on immediate economic controls, "There will not be a person alive who will not bitterly rue this tragic, needless neglect."

Urging that the administration and Congress get together on a standby economic controls law — or that Congress do it alone if necessary — the New York financier and adviser to presidents said: "The next war — and all of us pray it will be avoided — is likely to explode in a big smash. Cities may be all but obliterated. Who knows where Congress will be?"

"You face a simple issue," Baruch said in a statement to the Senate Banking Committee. "Are we to take the elementary precaution of writing into law now what we know would have to be done in event of emergency?"

"Or shall we neglect this vital measure of defense and, in doing so, increase the risk of war, add to the toll of dead and wounded if war does come and make inflation certain — all needlessly?"

Baruch had been invited to give his views to the Senate committee, which is considering various legislative proposals for some sort of standby controls law.

French Chief Pledges Aid

MONTELMAR, France (AP) — Premier Rene Mayer, flying Tuesday to the United States to see President Eisenhower, says France is ready to help build a United Europe "providing its stature as a world power is recognized."

The premier spoke at a banquet after laying the first stone for a 60 billion franc (174 million dollar) dam on the Rhone River.

Speaking of the proposed European army pact, on which France has delayed ratification, Mayer said: "I will speak in the name of a country which is ready to participate in the construction of a united Europe recognizing its stature as a world power is recognized and that it is guaranteed the means to carry out its missions without giving up any of its duties, without compromising the French Union."

The French want to add clauses to the army treaty permitting them to withdraw forces from the European force for use in India, China and other overseas areas of the French Union. West Germany, particularly, opposes this.

The premier, who in Washington will discuss American economic and military aid for France, said, "we can be legitimately proud of the use we have made of American aid when it was given for economic ends."

Mary Pickford Leaves On Bond Selling Tour

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Today Mary Pickford embarks on a sentimental journey along the same bond-selling route she traveled in 1918.

America's sweetheart is again hitting the road for the U. S. Treasury Department, duplicating her trip to sell Liberty Bonds in World War I. This time it's a different war, and she is aiming her efforts at enlisted workers in the bond-a-month plan.

Mrs. Pickford leaves at noon today on the Santa Fe Chief. She will make appearances in Chicago and New York. Then she goes to Washington, where Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower will honor her at a tea attended by the wives of Supreme Court justices, Cabinet officers, senators, etc. A two-month tour will follow, with Miss Pickford visiting such cities as Boston, Philadelphia, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Dallas, Denver, Salt Lake City, Portland, Ore., and San Francisco.

When I called on Miss Pickford at her legendary home, Pickfair, she was in a dither about her departure.

"Buddy (Rogers, her husband) couldn't figure how I could be so busy getting ready to leave," she said. "I told him a man couldn't understand. All he would have to take would be a few suits and a couple of pairs of shoes. I have to take an outfit for every occasion and a pair of shoes for each outfit."

However, she told the treasury she would accept no social engagements on the trip.

"I am going out to do my duty as a citizen," she said, "which is a small thing when you think of what our boys are doing in Korea. I am not going to exploit Mary Pickford. For all I know, I may never make another picture. I want to devote all my time on the tour to selling bonds."

She reminisced about the 1918 tour. "I went out with Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and Marie Dressler. I was the only one who came back with a voice. (Those were days before public address systems.)

"That's understandable when you realize we appeared before 100,000 people from the steps of the Treasury Building on Wall Street. Naturally, we couldn't be heard past the first few rows; the rest had to get the idea by gestures."

"Whenever we went, Charlie would have to give his little duck walk. Douglas would climb halfway up the side of the stage and I would let down my curls."

The once-poor little Canadian girl remembers vividly how she was entertained on the tour, particularly at a dinner given by Douglas MacArthur's mother-in-law in Philadelphia. "I'll never forget the long stood behind each chair," she recalled.

Miss Pickford discoursed on a number of other topics, including Chaplin. "I don't know why he killed off the little character he used to play. His greatest gift to the world. When he started to delve into those problems, he was not as successful."

"I imagine he must miss California, as everyone would who has since 1912."

The 3-D trend—"It is an important shot in the arm for the movies, but it is not as important as sound. It will be difficult to find intimate comedies and dramas will not do. Perhaps the present screening can be used for close scenes, opening up to the big screen for long shots."

Pair Stage Brief Escape

SALEM (AP) — Two prisoners put on civilian clothing, stole guards' caps and walked out of the main gate of the state prison here Saturday evening.

But their freedom lasted only a few minutes. The gate guard who let them pass became suspicious and notified the guard captain.

The captain, Ellsworth Herder, jumped into a car and took off after the pair. He found them walking down the street a few blocks away.

Warden Virgil J. O'Malley identified the prisoners as Harry L. Patterson, serving seven years on a felony conviction in Deschutes County, and William Downs, 22, serving 23 years on a robbery conviction in Douglas County.

O'Malley said the pair stole the guards' hats from the assistant warden's office. He said he didn't know where they got the other clothing that they had exchanged for their prison garb.
