University Singers Go Over Big With KF People

The University Singers from the School of Music of the state university presented a highly enjoyable concert Wednesday evening to a very appreciative audience. The program was sponsored by the University Mothers and Dads for the benefit of the local scholarship fund.

Under the fine direction of Donald Allison, the choral group of 60 voices sang a well chosen and varied program with beautiful interpretive effects and excellent dynamic gradation. While the sopranos fell a bit short on extreme high tones and the women's voice quality generally tended toward thinness, yet the blend and balance and adherence to pitch were remarkably good.

Outstanding in this writer's view was the presentation of two numbers from the modern group: the intense and dramatic "Tree of Brilliance" of Chavez and Berger's brilliant "Brazilian Psalm." For easy listening one would choose the latter, which was obviously enjoyed by both the singers and listeners. Expert accompaniment was done for this group by Joyce Blumberg.

Several 18th century madrigals, interesting for their delicacy and characteristic canonical style, were well-done by a group of 12 students.

Martino solos by Wayne Mercer were excellently performed, with finesse, delicacy and beauty of interpretation.

Incidental solos were Douglas Stobie, Janis Evans and Dorothy Anderson.

"Mighty Oregon", which ended the evening's music was directed by Madelon Adler, local graduate from the modern group, the intense and dramatic "Tree of Brilliance" of Chavez and Berger's brilliant "Brazilian Psalm."

Talk Of The Town Ranges Over Hollywood's Topics

HOLLYWOOD — Talk of the town in Hollywood this week.

The cascade of new announcements into the field being Joseph Schenck and Michael Todd. The good impression created by the preview of the 20th-Fox Cinema scope which shapes up as the process to beat. The blast against "irresponsible comments and criticism" by J. L. Warner, who is punning his studio's hopes so far on pictures requiring glasses.

The beautiful acceptance speech by Shirley Booth when she received her Oscar. Bob Hope's fine job of emceeing Hollywood's biggest blowout. The great over-all public relations job accomplished by televising the academy event, enjoyed by the winners.

The personal triumph at the Billmore of Audrey Hepburn in "Olivia", an otherwise undistinguished play.

The shooting of two pictures at RKO after a film drought of many months. The continuing evacuation of stars, directors and producers from MGM, with 20th-Fox expected to follow suit. The blow to Warner Workers—the announced 90-day vacation from production on the lot.

Doc Powell's recovery from his serious illness and his hit as the director of "Split Second"—Vivien Leigh's nervous collapse, a grim parallel to her role in "A Street Named Desire." The hint that perhaps the script of her picture may have contributed to her breakdown.

The televising of local hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee, which can evoke more suspense than some of the thrill shows. The signing of Ray Bolger by ABC, with indications the TV network will go after more top names. The continued excellence of the "Mister Peepers" TV show, which is beautifully cast.

The flop of "Swans Devild" in its second runs in Los Angeles. Ron Russell's triumph in "Wonderful Town" and "Walter Davis" folds in "Two's Company" on Broadway.

Red Offensive In Korea May Be "Find Out" Tactic

TOKYO — The creeping Chinese Red offensive in Western Korea this week possibly was designed to determine whether there is an ammunition shortage in Korea, and to test Allied troop and commanders who recently replaced retreating fighting men.

Gen. James A. Van Fleet, former U. S. Eighth Army commander, testified in Washington that an ammunition shortage existed most of the time he was in Korea.

Some officers here attribute the Communist attacks directly to the disclosure of that testimony. They speculate the Chinese are trying to find out whether the Allies have enough ammunition to carry them through heavy fighting. For that reason, some freely express resentment over Van Fleet's testimony.

The roar of Allied artillery fire and bombs may be giving the Reds their answer.

The Chinese smashed first at the U. S. Seventh Infantry—just after Maj. Gen. Arthur Trudeau replaced Maj. Gen. Wayne Smith as division commander.

The furious Red attack knocked the division off Old Baldy.

Flushed with victory, the Reds threw a 3,500 man attack against U. S. First Marine Division outposts 23 miles southwest of Old Baldy.

Despite setbacks, United Nations commanders, including Gen. Mark Clark, do not consider the situation serious, although they are concerned with Allied casualties.

Both sides have lost heavily. The battles are bloody but not major operations.

Fish Closing Area Changed

SALEM — The House Fish and Game Committee Friday toned down a proposal to close an area one mile wide and two miles long at the mouth of the Umpqua River to commercial fishing.

The committee decided to narrow the proposed box-like area to a triangular zone of the same size. Game commission officers said it would be less difficult to police the triangle.

The committee approved a suggestion by Rep. Earl Hill, Cushman, for an interim committee to confer with fisheries officials in Washington and Oregon on salt water fishing regulations.

Washington doesn't require a license for sports fishing in salt water. Oregon requires such a license for fishing up to three miles offshore.

Hill, a former member of the Oregon Fish Commission, said there had been much confusion and problems of enforcement all along the Oregon Coast because of difficulty in tracing origin of salmon landed at docks in recreational areas.

Oleo Heir Sentenced To Prison

NEW YORK — Minot F. (Mickey) Jekle, also heir convicted in a cafe society vice case was sentenced to three to six years in prison.

He was convicted on two counts of compulsory prostitution — legal terminology for living off the earnings of call girls.

Jekle was sentenced to from three to six years on each count, with the sentences to run concurrently.

General Sessions Judge Francis L. Valente said it was "unpleasant to deprive anyone of liberty" but that it was necessary in this case to "orient" Jekle's thinking.

Jekle was sentenced last Friday to eight months in the workhouse on his plea of guilty to illegally possessing two guns. One found in his apartment and one in his automobile when he was arrested in the vice case last August.

The chunky heir accused of living off Pat Ward and other call girls while waiting for an inheritance to come due was convicted on the vice charges Feb. 27. He had pleaded innocent.

Valente said Jekle's attitude as outlined in a 13-page probation report "renders meaningless any plans submitted by his parents for his rehabilitation."

The defense had expressed hope Jekle would receive a suspended sentence if it could be shown there would be taken for him to lead a new life away from his cafe society haunts.

Jekle, brought from the workhouse, wore a blue suit, white shirt, and blue tie and black shoes.

He appeared neither stressed nor surprised at the sentence, as he had when the jury returned its guilty verdict. Defense attorneys said the case would be appealed.

Gas Pipeline Meet Recess

WASHINGTON — A Power Commission hearing on applications of five companies for permission to pipe natural gas to the Pacific Northwest was in recess over the weekend and will enter its sixth week next Monday.

A witness Friday for the Pacific Northwest Pipeline Co., only one of the five firms which would not rely on Canadian gas, went into detail on various facilities and costs of Pacific's proposed 3,000 mile pipeline from the San Juan Basin of Colorado and New Mexico.

Richard D. Rickards of Houston, Tex., designer of the pipeline, estimated the total cost of the project at 150 million dollars, and said in answer to questions raised by attorneys for competing firms that he anticipated no trouble getting rights-of-way over federal lands.

He estimated branch line costs at Walla Walla, Wash. - Pendleton, Ore., $27,335; Yakima Valley-Wenatchee, Wash., $1,761,311; Hanford-Richland, Wash., $332,614; Spokane - Pasco, Wash., $1,222,840; Portland, Ore., $242,334.

Boy's Mother Tells Story

PORTLAND — The mother of David Greer Jr. passed her Friday morning and learned that her 11-year-old son will be handled by juvenile authorities rather than by criminal justice on the Tuesday stabbing of his father and step-mother.

The boy's real mother, Mrs. Margaret Edwards, grew up from San Francisco where she has a civil service office job, and changed to a train for Kennewick, her father, R. E. Livingston, lives near there on a farm, she said.

From Kennewick she was to go to Pendleton to see her son. Thursday a Grand Jury there refused to indict him in the death, and recommended that juvenile court take over.

Mrs. Edwards said she and the boy's father began to quarrel while she was working as a waitress at Hanford, and were divorced some years ago. She said the father put custody of the boy through default — she didn't know he was going to try for custody.

Since the divorce, she said, she saw the boy during summers when he was at his father's farm and she visited there.

Shortly after the divorce she married Omar Edwards. They have been separated about two years, she said.

Mrs. Edwards was accompanied on the trip by her sister, Mrs. Doris Schoenwald of Sacramento. David was to be at Hermiston Friday afternoon for his parents' funeral.

Organization Pickets Out

SALEM — The House Labor and Industries Committee voted 6 to 3 Friday for the bill to ban organization picketing by labor unions, and junked all other proposals to curb labor.

The House will vote on the bill next Tuesday, with sponsors of the bill confident it will go to the Senate without difficulty.

Organizational picketing is done when a union wants to influence workers to join the union.

The bill, modeled after the federal Taft-Hartley Law, is a compromise between employers who want severe curbs on labor, and employers who don't want any.

Labor unions bitterly oppose the bill.

Sponsors say the bill would apply only to picketing of small business not engaged in interstate commerce, since the Taft-Hartley Law already forbids organizational picketing of firms in interstate commerce.

Committee members voting for the bill were Reps. Ed Cardwell, Sweet Home; W. W. Chadwick, Salem; Joseph M. Dyer, Astoria; Kenneth Goodall, Oswego; Loren Stewart, Cottage Grove; and H. R. Weatherford, Walla Walla.

Voting against the bill were Reps. Gust Anderson, Portland; Robert R. Klemsan, St. Helens; and Phil Roth, Portland.

Morse Proving Take It Ability

WASHINGTON — Sen. Morse (Ind.-Ore.), who bolted the Republican party last fall, has changed his mind about moving to the Democratic side of the Senate — for the time being, at least.

Morse told the Senate Friday his decision to "stay put" was prompted by a "completely unfounded" published report that his intended switch to the Democratic side was due to his not being able "to take it any longer."

The report had said some of his Republican colleagues were saying mean things about Morse and making life miserable for him.

Morse indicated to newsmen last week he felt he should ally with the minority Democrats because, as an independent, he is a minor

Malin Farm Bureau Rally Meeting

MALIN — A rally meeting of the Malin Farm Bureau was held for Thursday evening, March 22, at the Malin Community Church. Meeting with local members for the purpose of reorganizing and electing new officers were, Roy Henley, field representative of the Oregon Farm Bureau, District of Talent, Regional Director, Livestock, Bonanza, County Farm Bureau, President; Leland Cherris, Chairman for Klamath County, County Farm Bureau Treasurer; Mrs. Eber Klippen, and Walter Jendrowski, Assistant County Agent.

The business meeting was conducted by Leland Cherris, at which time new officers for the Malin Farm Bureau were elected as follows: President, Ed Stasby, vice president, Charles P. Street and voting delegate, Ray Dray. The officers elected a next meeting, giving the nominating committee time to conduct the next possible candidates.

Chairman Leland Cherris introduced Stanley Trig, who spoke of the purposes and aims of the Farm Bureau. Knowledge of legislation, as pertaining to farming, he said, is one of the main purposes of the Bureau. At present, he added, 30 percent of all farmers in the county are members of the Farm Bureau and it is their aim to help and gain membership to enable voters to win the support of the farming interests of the future. He said several instances where the farmers, by being organized and presenting their problems to the proper person, had benefited.

To give a better picture of the part the women can play in being a part of Farm Bureau, Mrs.
