

Permanent Peace In Korea Studied As Truce Confab Hopes Soar; Lines Marked

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—Plans to make a permanent peace for war-torn Korea and perhaps negotiate with the Communists on other critical Far Eastern issues are beginning to shape up here as truce prospects brighten.

One idea receiving official consideration, it was understood today, is that any long-term peace arrangements should provide for a north-south dividing line at the narrow waist of the peninsula about 80 miles north of present battle lines.

Under provisions already worked out, an armistice would become effective along this present line. However, some authorities here believe this would not make a workable division of the country over a long period.

The battle line is generally already north of Parallel 38, which divided North and South Korea before the Red attack. The Communists presumably would object to any northward shift.

The belief is that the South Korean government would accept a border at the Korean waist since this would give it control over approximately 85 per cent of the country. Such an arrangement would reduce the North Korean position to a minimum, just short of extinction. It would, however, leave a buffer zone between South Korea and major Red Chinese and Soviet interests in Manchuria and Siberia. Hence there is some feeling that the Red governments of China and Russia—if not North Korea—might be willing to move the permanent peace line north. No one here has any idea what kind of compensation they might bargain for.

This and a host of other questions are becoming of considerable importance because of the Soviet peace offensive and the steps taken by the Reds toward agreeing on an acceptable truce in Korea.

Among the provisions of an armistice worked out prior to the deadlock over prisoners of war repatriation was one stating that the military negotiators should recommend to the countries concerned a "political conference" to settle "the questions of the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea, the peaceful settlement of the Korean question, etc."

President Eisenhower said in a troops would have to remain in the region of Korea for a long time. This could include Japan, however, and would not necessarily mean indefinite manning of a truce line.

Negotiation on withdrawal of United Nations and Chinese forces from Korea will unquestionably be one of the problems of the political conference.

What authorities here are uncertain about is the implication of that "etc." Under this heading the Reds may seek to bring up a series of issues with which they would hope to confuse and divide the Allies. And the Eisenhower administration, hoping to get peace throughout the Far East rather than in Korea alone, may feel it has no alternative other than to broaden the conference.

A conference restricted to Korea, to embrace efforts by the U. S. and its allies to end the war in Indochina and get the Reds to call off their guerrillas in Malaya.

On the other hand, a conference widened to include such matters would also be open to questions the Communists presumably would like to raise, among them the status of Red China.

Fort Klamath Holds Rite To Mark Easter Sunday

By MYRTLE WIMER
FORT KLAMATH—Fair weather and sunny skies prevailed here on Sunday, April 8, and in observance of Easter, special services were held at 9:30 a.m. at the Fort Klamath Community Methodist church, followed by a program presented by pupils of the local Sunday School under the direction of their teachers.

Easter Lilies, pussywillows, daffodils and other blooms of early spring were banked in profusion about the church interior and placed in the windows. Symbolic of Easter, against the background of a large cross, flowers were arranged before the pulpit in vases flanked by candles in holders, the cross, flower standards and holders all having a lovely brushed brass finish, the whole being the handiwork of Richard H. Wilson, who made and donated the useful and decorative articles to the local church.

Church services were opened by the 12 members of the junior choir, who sang the processional, "Holy, Holy, Holy" as they entered the church from the Sunday School classroom in the rear of the building. During the services, the group also sang the Easter hymn, "Lift Your Glad Voices". The junior choir is composed of twelve children ranging in age up to twelve years, and is directed by Mrs. Bert Gray, with Mrs. Richard H. Wilson the assistant leader.

Text of Rev. C. Elery Echlin's special Easter message was "Why Seek Ye the Living Among the Dead?" At the conclusion of the sermon, Gayle Opal Page, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene A. Page, received baptism from Rev. Echlin.

Charming in their Easter bonnets and finery, Sunday School pupils presented the following program—recitation, "Welcome", by Ellen Vestich; song, "The Roosters", by Mrs. Lloyd Nicholson's primary and beginner class, which includes Daniel Culver, Judy Culver, Dale Kendall, Lynn Hescoc, Barbara Nicholson, Martha Williams and Roger Nicholson; recitations by two members of Mrs. Raymond S. Loosley's junior class, "The Tiny Brown Seed," by Helen Hescoc, and "In April," by David Wilson; "Nature's Message," a song by all Sunday School pupils; "The Easter Song," by Darla Brewer, who is also a member of Mrs. Loosley's class; "The Meaning of Easter" by primary class pupils Gretchen Wilson, Barbara Nicholson, Lyle Brewer and Jay Williams; recitations by two of Mrs. William Brewer's class, "What They Say at Easter," by Judy McCauley, and "An Easter Thought," by Richard Nicholson; a song, "Tis God Who Sends the Spring," by the entire Sunday School; a recitation by Phyllis Wood of Mrs. Brewer's class, "Good News." All songs included on the program and sung during church services were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Brewer.

The highlight of the Easter program was the closing number, an impressive Bible Times play, "He Lives!" which was presented by Mrs. Hansford T. (Mike) Williams intermediate Methodist Youth Fellowship group, the production being coached and directed by Mrs. Williams, who also designed and made the pretty Biblical costumes worn by the participants. Portraying the various characters in the play were Anita Vaden, Enid Williams, Janet Wilson, Martha Williams, Marie Nicholson, Sharon Hescoc, Gladys Kendall, Diane and Jeanette Jenkins, Wynn Hescoc, Michael McCauley, and Lawrence Kendall. Concealed from the audience in the adjoining Sunday School classroom, as a finale to the play, a song, written and composed especially for the occasion by the director, Mrs. Williams, was sung by Mrs. Richard H. Wilson, who played her own soft organ accompaniment.

Excellence of the presentation by the Youth Group and the inspiring message it conveyed may be judged from the following comments heard at random from those present at the conclusion of the production: "The play was as good as any sermon"; "It makes one stop and think"; "A special contribution was made on Easter Sunday to the local church by Mrs. Arthur Short, Medford, mother of Stewart and Lloyd Nicholson of Fort Klamath, who spent the weekend here with her sons and their families. She donated $5 toward purchase of a church flag."

At the close of the program, benediction was pronounced by Mrs. Raymond S. Loosley.

Civic Club Hosts Dinner

CHEMULT—Over 70 members of the community were served at a dinner at the Civic Club Sunday from 1:30 to 3 p.m. The Civic Club furnished the main dish of baked ham and all others brought potluck which was planned in advance. The dinner followed an egg hunt in which the older group hunted outside in snow banks, under lodgepole pines and the small fry group inside the Clubhouse. Golden eggs found were entitled to a prize and there were six winners: Josette Stockman, Lynda Jean Jessup, Larry Masten, Karl Ramsey and Billy Taylor.

A Bike and Trike Parade featured first and second prize winners in both groups, Ernie Taylor, first and Shirley Ramsey, second in trike group, Denny Jessup, first and Karl Ramsey, second in bike group. Judges participating were: C. C. Long, William Searcy and Mac McAfee.

Other entrees were given beautifully decorated eggs made by Mrs. Ray Darnell. They were: Pat and Sharon O'Brien, Larry and Normie Masten and Billy Taylor. In the trike set was little Bobby Galbreath. Everyone had plenty to eat and lots of fun. Several members attended church in Gilchrist and Crascent before the Community got-together.
